I know that they used to be and I have one (KOH0767) and a ham license (KE4MVU). I'm legal on both. I also have a general radiotelephone operator license.

It's not what you did there. What you didn't do in Vietnam appears to have defined your time there. You were a frustrated amateur in Vietnam which caused you to under go a career change.

And if you choose to believe that the scouts and the adult leaders are interacting as equals, then go right ahead even though that is not the way they are set up.

Just to clarify, I have never personally experienced such discrimination on the air and have no reason to avoid voice. I have known one youth who was discriminated against though. She was working CW and doing it better than the person with whom she was having a QSO. When that person learned her age, they terminated the QSO.

I don't think so.

Steve has been warned away from visiting my home, and that's good enough for me at this time.

His anti-everything comments are public record. Ditto his paranoid
"liar behind every tree" fantasy. Google provides.

Being the prolific poster that he is, he's probably made hundreds if not thousands of posts from his employers computers. If they don't already know what kind of idiot they have on "thier" hands by now they never will.

I thought I was clear about this: I am no more a "witness" than anyone

But even that rejected the freak and genetic defect Lloyd Austin Davies.

Davies was recently busted again for DUI and has previous criminal

What's a "Nurseing", you illiterate pervert and deviant? Don't you mean "Nursing?" Are you sure you didn't huff too many spray paint cans or are you naturally brain damaged?

Where in the blue blazes did you get a questuion like that in response to the quoted paragraph, Brian?

The FCC's jurisdiction over Amateur Radio has NEVER been in contest. This is some dodge that your buddy like to try and trun from time to time.

No one in this forum has ever "denied", "disclaimed", alluded to"
or otherwise attempted to suggest that the FCC is NOT the governing agency for civil radio in the United States.

I DARE you to provide ONE quote where ANYONE in this forum has stated otherwise.

>We ought to be able to eliminate the code exam for free American >amateurs.

There are Amateurs imprisoned over Morse Code? I know Flippo and Burton
are in jail for QRMing and unlicensed operation, but WHO is in jail over Code?

>I disagree, but does there need to be organized support to maintain an >unnecessary and arbitrary requirement?

Please cite for me some known law that is enforced WITHOUT "organized support", Brain.

I can't think of a single law that gets enacted and enforced
WITHOUT
"organized support", and I certainly can't think of any law that ever got revoked or deleted without "organized support". The Bill of Rights bears
witness to same, espeicially the 18th and 21st amendments.

>Our government may take years to eliminate the code exam.

Brian...copy this post, including headers, and save it.

I am willing to wager $100.00 US Dollars (one hundred), that the Federal Communications Commission shall, either on thier own volition or acting on a duly submitted petition, within 180 days of the ratification of any changes to ITU S25.5, delete Morse Code testing as a requirement for ANY class of Amateur

Radio license in the United States.

>Unless they

How can they "misinterpret" Part 97?

What part of Part 97 as it presently exists lends itself to "misinterpret(ation)" such that VE's could even remotely consider NOT complying with examinations for Element 1?

>> >Your zeal only exposes you for what you are.

Let's see...."clings to the past"...

Hmmmm....I certainly AM active on CW on HF...But Wait! There's More!

EME...(building a station)...airborne telemetery for DASH surveillence, mentoring, ATV...

Whew...Could go on, but why...??? I've helped dozens of NEW hams get on the air, almost all of which have been Post 1991 and post
"Restructuring"
licensees.

No one in any club I belong to (three) even remotely supports "clinging to the past". Nothing I read in ANY periodical suggests that Amateur Radio
"cling to the past" other than the usual historical interest expressed by ANY group in it's development. Every major periodical is ripe with new technology
and techniques articles.

Nothing, Brian...

Now, Please provide the requested verifications of YOUR assertions

Mark,

>>Indeed ecil does admt to that so do I. What we ask is why certain skils
are being places out of proportion to their value? and Why Morse in particaluar retains its place today.<<

It is in place to keep YOUO off the HF bands, Mark, didn't you know that?

In 1916, HPM was given a Tarot Card reading by an all-knowing oracle and she forsaw that you would one day create hate and discontent for your fellow licensee's by your actions in this NG and on the air. Furthermore, he was shown that you would be responsible for the disruption of major disaster
communications because of your ineptness and arrogance.

Therefore, he initiated a cospiratorial effort to ensure the perpetuation of Morse Code so that you and others of your ilk would be thwarted from becoming a threat to the airwaves.

>>It is simply another of lies to claim we don't admit to that.
Indeed
Iam shocked by you admiting to that, since most ProCoder on and on about how easy Code is for everybody<<

I know people with incapacities worse than the dyslexia you claim that have mastered Morse Code, so what is YOUR problem? And I know that of those for whom neurological deficits sufficient to cause them to really be able to copy code used a Neurologist, NOT and Allergist to document thier ailments!

So you are either lazy, a liar, a fool, or a combination of the three.
Please don't tell us, Mark...it's SUCH a challenge to find out for ourselves!!!

I don't beleive that, never have, see above. You refuse to become

I have always been talking about the interaction of equals. You keep trying to switch it to the merit badge counselor. I choose not to fall for the bait and switch. Since I've stated my point several times, I will not continue this discourse as I've no interest in your bait and switch tactics.

Sorry, Brain...Several issues.

First of all, no wager was ever "made". In order for a wager to take place, once person has to make it then the other accept it. Had Markie been honest (yeah...like THAT'S going to happen....) he'd have gone on to point out that you never "accepted" the wager...

Secondly, if Y O U were honest (again, about as unlikely as my Britney fantasies...) Y O U would have admitted that you never "accepted the wager. You ignored it.

Lastly, even if we HAD made a "wager" it would be a felony for you to receive the wager via an agent across state lines...Again, further demonstration of your propensity to violate the law. Not that that fact surprises anyone.

Having seen his "style" here the past several weeks, my wager is that Steve's prepared numerous escape routes with wiggle room to easily

Not sure how it works in your country but in the UK, CB users have to be licenced as do Amateurs... I know in the past you used to have to have an FCC licence for CB as i remember the application forms quite clearly being in the Boxes that they used to come in. That was back in the late 70's though.
My original point was that just because some dum dum decides to mess about on the Amateur bands the majority of the Ham fraternity immediately call them CB'ers.. basically as an insult. Ie.. anyone messing about and causing trouble must be a CBer. They arent prepaired to accept its either idiot Hams or their children messing about on their radios, or just someone who bought/nicked a radio and hasnt the brains to use it properly.

The majority of CB users are perfectly well behaved individuals as are most Amateurs but you know yourself in all walks of life there are the sort you could quite happily do without..

Graham,
The licensing requirement for CB radio operators in the USA was dropped back in the 1970's when Jimmy Carter was president, he was responsible for dropping the licensing requirement.

In the UK you Legally require a licence... no test is involved. Its basically just a tax on the airwaves. But if thats the case, you say unlicenced Amateurs arent Amateurs, they are just unlicenced users... likewise anyone operating unlicenced on the CB isnt a CB'er. He, also, is an Unlicenced User... I realise its a little different in the US.

Seems a bit unfair really. The thing that put me off going for my ticket was learning morse. I honestly cant see the point in it nowadays even though i accept it had its uses and can still "get through" when other methods fail but to be honest... as its only a hobby now.. why bother (use the phone) Obviously theres an advantage using it in war of course but technology has progressed.
The thing that put me off M3 was the fact i couldnt legally use 27MHz. That and the fact i would be scoffed at in here probably more than being a CB'er
;o)

Most truckers in the UK arent that friendly. Theres a number of times ive been nearly run off the road in my car because they see the CB antenna and think... aaaah a skateboard user.... Dont know about the 27680 reference but in the UK they hang about the 27.78125MHz slot eating bacon sarnies as they ratchet.....

Hi hi!!!

Reagan was President of the United States from 1981-1989. I guess you could call that the late '70's! LOL...

You obviously haven't listened to cb in the USA. The cbers here have made 11 meters the sewer pit of the radio spectrum as well as the other frequencies they operate illegally on.

Exceedingly late 70's :o). I remember the banter between him and Maggie Thatcher. She was Prime minister in 79 which is where the confusion sprung from. I was more into girls, CB and music than politics so a lot of that went over my head... thank god.....

More nails in the Dudly coffin are his abject failure to even once NAME a single piece of aviation electronics, either by proper nomenclature or familiar name after all those years of "avionics service." That's unheard of in a field where shop-talk is common. The best that Dudly could do is name some "MARS equipment" (of decades ago) in messages, something which could have been cribbed from one of the many ham websites.

One of the most telling of Dudly's blunders in replies is his failure to note what "Vinson" was (an older standard of electrnic cryptography) when you asked about his "service under 'Colonel' Vinson" at 'Gordon.' :-)

Way early, Dudly tried to cover up this lack of familiarity in both communications and/or aviation electronics military equipment by saying "it was secret and [he] couldn't reveal secrets." The electronics industry trade publications have long published equipment names, contracts, manufacturers, and general information...long before Dudly was allegedly in the USMC. Those publications still do. All public info.

Dudly "hunted for ET?" I missed that one. From the looks of his postings, I think ET found HIM! :-)

BTW, Dudly did change his "signings" to "Semper Fi" later.
[that might have happened after "JAG" started on TV]

>There's plenty more information that is publically available about >you, but I think I made my case -- using -YOUR OWN WORDS-!!!

Dudly isn't bothered by mere "details" like that...:-)

>BTW, what happened to your first marraige? Were you lying when you

Very early on Dudly bitched about "paying all that alimony"
[to his first wife] in here. <shrug>

Dudly is living his own imaginary life in the Internet.

Either that or his rationalizing has it that "some hacker"

>need to prove that you are a liar.

Thousands of postings later and Dudly DENIES ever doing anything wrong. Dudly still has to provide some verifiable references to any of his claims about his "military career."

Dudly WAS once "commissioned" in the Tennessee STATE Guard (NOT affiliated with the National Guard). For a short time his scowling visage was on one of their "brigade" unit photo pages as a "First Lieutenant" and "communications officer." The photo had him in cammies (the northern type, very macho). A Tennessee STATE Guard brigade is the size of an Army company and they hold "meetings" once a month, ostensibly to "refresh"
their knowledge of military policing (main task in the state).
The Tennessee State Guard has since revised its web pages.
Dudly's scowling visage is no longer there. [tsk, tsk]

At present, Dudly has a "commission" (?) as a "Captain" in the Tennessee Civil Air Patrol. No photo of him there although the state CAP Commander (a female) has hers on display as well as some others. Dudly's QRZ.COM biography page shows him scowling into the camera while wearing a flight suit...very macho and 'uniformish.' Note: Biographic details such as photos and personal details beyond that supplied by FCC database information is submitted to QRZ by the individuals involved...there is no claim that QRZ people actually check up on such submissions.

Dudly dotes on uniforms, it seems. He never smiles in those photos. [does he need a dentist?]

He once said he was a Purchasing Agent for a medium-sized electronics company and implied he "knew a great deal about electronics engineering" as a result of 'working with' the engineers there. PAs are form-fillers and telephone call makers and catalog page thumbers. Their "engineering knowledge" is quite limited and NOT "on the bench" doing a thing. Dudly knows dink about electronics engineering.
Dudly "worked there" less than a half year according to posts in here, either taking that job or quitting "due to [emotional upset over] the death of his daughter."

We are all required to accept his claims as "true" since the PCTAs all frown on challenging anything of anyone criticizing someone suffering a personal loss. No one else but Dudly can possibly have such traumatic episodes in their life and thus nobody else deserves any slack.

Dudly's excuse is that everyone else is a "liar" so only he "tells the truth" just by mere mention in a post here. Real facts are irrelevant. Arithmetic is irrelevant. Someone is always "hacking his accounts" and "posting as him" if he is challenged. He's nuts.

Damifino. Heil just hasn't been specifc about it. Can't "take shots" at something invisible. :-)

Poor Davie has forgotten my quoting from the Army Center for Military History which mentions the good morale service that Army MARS did in Vietnam.

>I think Len's a little too hard on you guys. I'm sure that your cuts

I'm sure Jack the Ripper thought the same... :-)

I'm also sure Ted Bundy thought all his female victims "were asking for it."

>> Len's description of what it was like to be under artillery fire--even >> though he was never actually under artillery fire.

I was once but it was from U.S. Army artillery. :-)

Just the same, the 8235th Army Unit (that I was in) never allowed any Tokyo territory to fall into communist hands! :-)

At the same time, that same battalion of signalmen were moving message "traffic" at the rate of 220 thousand a month over the Army Command and Administrative Network (later integrated into the DCS or Defense Communications System), a worldwide network. All with TTY. Not a single morse code link in that system since 1948.

Irrelevant. If Davie says I did bad, then I did bad. He is

James Weir runs RST Engineering. It is located in Grass Valley, CA, in Nevada County (California's "gold country"). He ran for Governor of California, had his picture in the L.A. Times as one of many candidates. [a former Austrian citizen won the election]

I sent Jim Weir one of my computer programs (LCie4, synthesis and analysis of passive-component inductor-capacitor filters) and he stated that this (freeware) program has been used by his students (successfully) in Grass Valley. We had some brief e-mail exchages that resulted in my modifying the older LCie program to fit the

DOS 7 in newer Windows. LCie was written in MS FORTRAN 5.1 but on an earlier operating system and that (now unsupported by MS) FORTRAN did not have the compiler links to fit DOS 7. LCie4 runs only under DOS, doesn't have the flash, dash, or pizazz of color Windows but is nonetheless accurate and proven. It is freeware to anyone requesting it...something I mentioned in rec.radio.amateur.homebrew some time ago.

RST Engineering makes some neat electronics for general aviation aircraft. RST has a nice website if anyone cares to look. One of the neat things they do is what I would term "SURFACE MOUNT VHF antennas" for aircraft fabric surfaces. :-) Neat! They don't stick out in the airstream and thus have minimal drag. [international civil aviation band is 108 to 137 MHz]

>But, but, but what if the Coslo BBS is up and running? Hi, hi!

Then the Coslonaut will - once again - be "at the edge of space!"

By the way, outer space is only a half hour's drive away... provided your car can go straight UP. :-)

That's IMPORTANT to him. Personally, I think he wants Dave Sumner's job of writing editorials in QST for the ARRL.

He ought to do a historical article on how he pioneered the NTS as a teen-age ham in those ancient days of the

The second one ought to go to long-time supporter and athlete

Well, after (ugh) reading through 3,599 filings on the FCC ECFS under WT Docket 05-235 (up to 31 October 2005), I'm convinced that way too many radio amateurs are still stuck to the glorious past of a half century ago in radio communications. Their bliss over the efficacy of morsemanship shines on under skies unclouded by progress in technology...which had already begun before they got their first amateur license. They BELIEVE deep in their little hearts that morsemanship is THE essential ingredient in becoming an extra-super-special radio "expert," "well-rounded" and a "leader" in amateurism. It's a Belief so deep, so basic, that they are convinced that ALL morsemen are "experts" on everything and those who don't Believe as they do are heretics who know nothing about everything.

Must be wonderful to exist in such deep delusions of grandeur, very satisfying, off in a wonderland of their own fantasies
of self-importance and Greatness. <shrug>

That should be BRIAN as in Brian Burke, but Mark keeps on with Dudly the Imposter's deliberate misspelling... :-(

My USPS address has been on dozens of bylines in Ham Radio magazine and in dozens of ECFS filings at the FCC. It is no secret. I don't need either pseudonyms nor fantasy pasts to express myself, here or anyplace else.

Thousands of his postings are intact on Google.

Dudly doesn't realize those are evidence of HIS fantasies.

>Being the prolific poster that he is, he's probably made hundreds if >not thousands of posts from his employers computers. If they don't >already know what kind of idiot they have on "thier" hands by now they

There's two takes on that. One, this newsgroup doesn't involve the medical profession anywhere. As such, it doesn't apply to any state medical licensing board. Two, such a medical board may not concern themselves with anyone's background.

There have been a few cases of deranged nurses who have killed patients, one last year in the east. The one most familiar to me is Elfren Saldivar, the convicted "mercy killer" at a Glendale, CA, hospital, an anesthiology-specialist nurse there; he had injected several elderly patients with some kind of fatal dose "to ease their suffering." That Glendale hospital had NOT done a good background check on Saldivar and could not see that he had done similar things at another hospital.

Mark is on his own. Back a few years, some anony-mousie tried to intimidate me publicly, saying he would be "in my neighborhood" at a certain period of time and wanted to "discuss things" with me in person. I printed up a large collection of that individual's postings, showing their full Internet routing, had a talk with the Foothill Division of the LAPD (who got that packet). My wife and I proceded to go up north to Washington to visit (scheduled long before that message exchange happened) while this individual was in the general area. The LAPD has had a "stalking" detail for a few years now after several incidents (and one fatality) of stalkers attacking their victims. While we were gone, this individual had tried telephoning me but got only our answering machine. Telephone company security office was informed and they apparently checked that out, both from the Caller ID info I had and the tape of the recorded message. The "stalker" had called from an unlisted number in the southern part of Greater Los Angeles, the best info I could get legally from the telephone company...never got close to where my residence was. I don't know what the LAPD did...they did some investigation but one can't get details on such if no overt crime had been committed.

The pseudo-macho types who try intimidation on computers only fool themselves. They don't understand that their "victims" can assemble a great deal of information on intimidators before anything goes down. Such would be excellent evidence of intent if they were nuts enough to try any physical violence of any kind. Worse (for them) is that it gives their target advance warning which could result in a very rude surprise for them when they do try something.

Very well stated, Graham. There used to be a license requirement for CB here in the US, but not anymore. (for a long time now)

I got my first CB license around 1972 or so..my dad had to sign for it. He thought I was nutz! (he still does) Had to search for someone to talk to ground wave back then..

It's not the majority of radio operators that are so quick to throw CBer's under the bus. In fact, many radio operators started with CB. A few high horse blowhards think 11 meters is only good for gutter snipes, (gutter snipes can be entertaining too).

It's a fun band, and invaluable on a highway trip.

He mentions nothing because he basically did nothing. Reservists do very little in their MOS and therefore retain very little regarding the same.

Case in point: the M16-A1 was manufactured by several different companies including General Motors and (are you ready for this?) Mattel. The venerable PRC-77 was the brainchild of the engineers at Motorola..... they must have been on drugs to design a radio with a dual switching IF system.... but hey, it worked. It just cost a whole lot more than a simpler design. And the VINSON crypto system has been documented many times on the net long before I ever mentioned it.

Given: a = b
Multiply both sides by [a]: a^2 = ab
Subract [b^2] from both sides: a^2 - b^2 = ab - b^2
Factor: (a + b)(a - b) = b(a - b)
Divide (a - b) from both sides: (a + b) = b
Since a = b, substitute: (a + a) = a Therefore: 2a = a
Divide both sides by [a]: 2 = 1

His "hero-wannabe" dysfunction isn't limited to the internet.....

He seeks praise as a hero in just about everything he does. He looks for it in the military .....the Marine Corps Reserve, the Air Force Auxilliary, CAP, TN State Guard..... he even made passive assertions that he was a Coast Guard vet. He discovered that the medical field is full of hero recognition so he became an LPN and works in emergency rooms. He got his ham license so he can work RACES. When he discovered the internet he extended his praise-panhandling to the newsgroups and the web, and even started his own yahoo group for hero-nurses.

But that hero-rush doesn't last very long so he seeks the opportunity to be the hero -beyond- the established emergency services. He drives around off-duty with a medical bag, a scanner and emergency lights, hoping to run across someone in distress that he can save. One step further and he'll be -staging- emergency situations just so he can be the hero (assuming he hasn't done so already).

Dudly is a very disturbed individual.

Doubtful. I haven't seen a header from any of his posts that wasn't consistent with the rest.

Uhhh....Lennie...What's with you and "facts"...?!?!

The current Tennessee Wing Commander is very much a male.

To the best of my knowledge, there's never been a female Wing Commander in Tennessee Wing. Several other wings are commanded by women.

There are no female Group commanders within Tennessee Wing.

Although there are female squadron commanders, none of them are in Group 2...I am a part of Group 2 staff. And I'm not a Captain, Lennie.
Haven't been for some time.

Yes, Lennie...You ARE a liar.

The above few lines proof of same since you expressed all of the above as "fact" while almost none of it is factual.

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of October 31, 2005:

Novice - 27,410 (4.1%) [decrease of 21,919]
Technician - 272,682 (41.1%) [increase of 67,288]
Technician Plus - 45,612 (6.9%) [decrease of 83,258]
General - 135,711 (20.4%) [increase of 23,034]
Advanced - 74,900 (11.3%) [decrease of 24,882]
Extra - 107,216 (16.2%) [increase of 28,466]

Total Tech/TechPlus - 318,294 (48.0%) [decrease of 15,960]

Total all classes - 663,531 (decrease of 11,261)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military, RACES or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

No...You can make silly allegations (hence your nick-name of "Silliland") that are just pie-in-the-sky guesses.

"Proof" would be some document that actually showed my reserve status above and beyond the Delayed Entry period...

The problem for YOU is that nothing of the sort exists.

> Your DOD record confirms your service from '74 to '92 (yes, that's Uhhhh...Looking for that reg wherein US Marines are not allowed to keep personal pursuits while on active duty...

And you make reference as to what my "DOD" (properly DoD) record states per my MOS's, but you and I BOTH know that that same record shows nothing but active duty service (Delayed Entry notwithstanding...)

> But this conflicts with your 1998 claim that you were a "former 10

Uh huh. Six, actually.

Thee are a LOT of Marines who are EMT's...Both as Crash-Rescue personnel on MCAS's and as "off duty" pursuits.

My first EMT card was in Pennsylvania in February 1986. PA EMT-MAST 014402. Followed up by EMT-1A in Orange County CA in June of 1986. I also held National Registry (took that test at the hospital at MCB Camp Pendleton) It has/had nothing to do with my MOS...Just what I was interested in doing.

BTW...I received a CG's Certificate of Commendation in 1988 for life-saving from CG Third MAW, then another one from the CG First MAW in 1990 for a second event...

That EMT training came in handy!

> Also, in the late

Uh....No...Why would having a part time job less than 10 miles from the base where I was stationed at (and 1.5 miles from where I lived...) be a problem?

Are all those Marines who work part-time jobs in Jacksonville, Oceanside, San Diego and other USMC-base associated cities doing something illegal?

Is working part time as an ER tech any different than working at Taco Bell, singing in a church choir or participating in the Big Brothers/Sisters programs...?!?!

> The ONLY way you could have been educated, trained and gained > experience as an EMT while in the Corps is if you were a reservist.

How is that? Did I violate some MCO in my 18 years by leaving the barracks and participating in non-USMC pursuits?

"Leatherneck" used to publish ton's of "human interest" stories on Marines who did exactly those things....

Is it YOUR contention that all of those Marines were NOT "real Marines" because they did something that wasn't associated with their official duties?

Uh...Actually I use "Paratus et Vigilans", a personal motto which means "Prepared and Vigilant".

Did I miss some law that says once someone uses a latin word in THEIR motto, no one else can use it...?!?!

I see you harbor the same "hate anyone who does more than I do" sentiments that Lennie and Brain do...

Of course you managed to screw up the one paid "uniformed" job you held, so I guess no one should expect you to be involved in any kind of "uniformed" volunteer work, huh...?!?!

> There's plenty more information that is publically available about > you, but I think I made my case -- using -YOUR OWN WORDS-!!!

So far, you've not "proven" a single thing.

Unless you can show me where NO OTHER MARINE >>EVER<< worked a part time job, went to school off duty, followed "personal" pursuits that were not part-and-parcel of thier USMC duties...?!?!

Geeze, Frankie...That was a looooooooooooooooooooooong stretch, want' it...?!?!

Then it seems you also have some comprehension issues and need a calculator.

> That's all I
> need to prove that you are a liar.

Uhhhhh....How's that?

So far all your "math" has proven is that while I was on active duty I ALSO had non-USMC pursuits. What part of MCO's were therein violated? Other than during Typhoon Condition 1A on Okinawa, I never spent one minute on Barracks Restriction, and even then THAT was
"island wide".

Frankie...You should try out for the part of the guy in the comic book "Fantastic Four" that can stretch like Silly-Putty, because you sure earned the opportunity here today!

Lastly...The Marine Corps, as do all the services, heavily recruit and covet their various Reserve assets...The USMC in particular requires the same degree of qualifications of their Reservists as they do their active duty components.

This is not something I made up, but a matter of public record and USMC policy.

I should know...I helped train Reservists at various times.

So...that having been said, even if I HAD been a Reservist, I would have had to meet the same standards as the Active Duty forces...

And considering those same Reserve (and National Guard) forces are carrying the same load as their active duty counterparts in Iraq right now, your "suggestion" that I may have been a Reservist as a negativism is ludicrous and assinine.

A licensed radio amateur with experience in the field. Somebody whose methods of analyzing the comments may be much more accurate than yours.

The information is available to all who will look for it. Easier to access than ECFS. You've claimed years and years of experience in "computer-modem communications", yet you can't find it? I am surprised.

How does your posting a 'scorecard' here tell the FCC anything, Len?

Your posts here are full of your ideas about How Amateur Radio Should Be. Your comments to FCC are full of your ideas about How Amateur Radio Should Be. By definition.

> Tsk. I could NOT "tell you anything" about amateur radio or > anything else if it was against what you wrote in here.

Posting is telling everyone who reads your words. They don't have to agree with what you tell them, but you're telling them just the same.

So you've already told me and others a lot about amateur radio - and a lot of other things. The truth of what you've told is a different issue...

> You
> would spend days, weeks, even years arguing over a "discussion"
> as you did on "age requirements" LONG AFTER I dropped it. :-)

If you had really "dropped it", there would be no discussion....

You've spent most of a decade on usenet arguing against a simple test for a license in a radio service with which you have no involvement. That's your right, of course, but it is kind of odd behavior. You must be very invested emotionally...

You've been doing heckling, catcalls, and booing from the peanut gallery in computer-modem communications since 1984, eh?
After all, you said you've been doing it since early December 1984...

One would think that with all that experience you could find the 'scorecard' of which I wrote.

> YOU are one of the hecklers.

How? Show us your definition of "heckler" and how it applies.

The definition I've always seen describes a "heckler" as someone from the audience who calls out to an onstage performer with derogatory remarks and insults.

I don't do that. If anyone in rrap is the master of derogatory remarks, it's you, Len.

But more important is the fact that you're not an onstage performer here. This is a completely different sort of venue, where opposing opinions (like mine) aren't "heckling".

Same person who made you the judge.

Really? How do you know?

Compare the percentages of commenters supporting Morse Code testing in 1998-1999 with those of the current NPRM. How much difference is there really?

And even your 'scorecard' shows the majority support at least some code testing, and oppose its complete elimination (as proposed in the NPRM).

How about that? Your desires are in the minority, Len!

You claim: "The attitude towards morse code testing in the U.S. amateur community has been CHANGING all along..." but when it comes to the actual comments even your flawed counting method shows the majority does not support the NPRM.

I'm not the one yelling and calling people names, Len. You are.

Not at all. I'm simply offering a solution to your problem. You can post
all you want - but that means you'll have to put up with opposing commentary. Deal with it.

What you want is different from the way things actually work, Len.

You may want everyone to just accept what you write here, but they may not.

Not "clearly", because you don't define what a "duplicate" really is.
If the same person files comments that are not identical, do you count them as duplicates? Or are they separate comments and counted as such?

Your tally indicates that you don't count nonidentical filings by the same person as duplicates.

> The duplicate filer For the NPRM gives his name as Vincent > Garcell.

17 filings!

> Another one Against the NPRM, with 13 total filings,

How about Leonard H. Anderson, who has 6 filings? Do they show up as a count of 1 or 6 on the tally of "for" filings? I think you count them as 6 in the "for" column because they're not identical and hence not duplicates.

> The ECFS totals ALL of the filings in one Docket on any Search.

You can select the type of filings, though. You could just look at Comments rather than all filings.

You don't have to, Len. But your scorecard would be more accurate if you did.

Why? You're the source of the inaccuracy, so I'm telling you. Can't you deal with an opposing opinion? Can't you accept change and go with a better method?

Not "anything", Len. Just some of your inaccuracies and mistakes.

Can't you take an opposing opinion?

Dear me, now an opposing opinion and some facts are "harrassment"?

> Why are you so OBSESSED with trying to toss me off?

I'm not trying to "toss you off" anything, Len. I'm just trying to discuss the accuracy of your "scorecard". But you seem to have enormous trouble dealing with opposing opinions.

Why should I accept changes that are unnecessary?
Why should I accept changes that are detrimental to the Amateur Radio Service?
Why should something be discarded just because it's old?

And existing ones. But it almost certainly won't affect you, Len.
You're not an existing licensee nor are you likely to be a new one.

Not at all.

How? It's quite obvious you don't want such a license and will probably never get one.

You don't have to state your "motivation". But it does seem odd that you won't state why you're so obsessed with a license test for a license you don't seem to want, and which has no effect on you at all.

> >FCC can also decide to change license privileges, subbands, etc., all

FCC isn't limited to the terms of an NPRM. Look at what happened in 1999. They proposed four license classes but the R&O reduced it to three.

> The TEST. The TEST does NOT affect those ALREADY LICENSED.

Yes, it does. If a change affects the amateur radio service itself, it affects
those already licensed.

> The TEST affects those GETTING INTO U.S. amateur radio.

But not only them.

And since you're clearly not one of them, why do you care so much?

Here's that description again:

"One of the first signs of that outside amateur radio was the USA's creation of Class C and D CB in 1958. NO test of any kind, just a Restricted Radiotelephone license form needed for anyone to use the 22 channels (23rd shared with radio control).
Excellent in large urban areas before the offshore products appeared about four years later and the trucking industry started buying them."

Here's what I "saw", Len:

"One of the first signs of that outside amateur radio was the USA's creation of Class C and D CB in 1958. NO test of any kind, just a Restricted Radiotelephone license form needed
for anyone to use the 22 channels (23rd shared with radio control).
Excellent in large urban areas before the offshore products appeared
about four years later and the trucking industry started buying them."

That's from your post on the subject, a few days ago. No mention of a trade-in or your first wife. The excellence you wrote about was cb.

And the fact remains that cb quickly went downhill in the late 1960s and early 1970s - about the same time frame as what you describe.

You can read your original post here:

Why?

But I don't think you use it.

Your '53 Healey was a classic sports car. Maybe not the fastest or most powerful thing on four wheels but definitely a classic - and classy too. Fun in the tradition of a Triumph or MG.

I am somewhat surprised that you still have the Johnson Viking Messenger, though. The thing has vacuum tubes, right? (At least the early Messengers did).

Of course the Johnson Viking Messenger is interesting from an historical POV because it was such a departure for the company. Instead of a big desk-crushing VFO transmitter, they built a compact lightweight transceiver of pretty good quality. And it still works!

So I guess it's not so surprising that for more than 40 years you've held onto one of the smallest Johnsons ever produced.

> >Do you see how the same could happen to amateur radio?

How can you can guarantee that what happened to cb cannot happen to amateur radio?

> 1. The 11 m amateur band of 1958 was taken away from amateurs

That's right. FCC made a big mistake doing that - one they're still trying to deal with.

> 2. NPRM 05-235 is about the MORSE CODE TEST for a United States > radio amateur license examination. That has NOTHING to do

Not directly. But there is a definite connection.
> 3. You try to connect (1) and (2) and there is NO possible > connection.

Of course there's a possible connection. If the loss of the Morse Code test causes amateur radio to become more like cb, it will have a profound effect on existing amateur radio operators. If the amateur bands become like the cb channels, existing amateurs will be affected.

Maybe you want the amateur bands to become like the cb channels..

> >I'm not saying that will happen, just that it could happen.

> >Existing licensees can be profoundly affected by rules changes.
> Only MENTALLY.

Nope. The effects can be much more. Do you want 40 meters to sound like the 40 cb channels?

> Their "radio world" would come to an end if > morse code testing stopped!

Not mine. I'll go right on enjoying Morse Code and Amateur Radio as long as possible.

> >Since your are not a radio amateur and not likely to become one > >regardless of rules changes, the NPRM results don't really affect you.
> Tsk, tsk, tsk. I'm "not likely to become one regardless of > rules changes?!?"

That's right. It's very unlikely that you'll ever become a licensed radio amateur. Your behavior proves it.

So the only way the elimination of the Morse Code test will affect you is mentally and emotionally.

> Now you pretend to "know" the future as well as "motivation!"

I'm saying it's very unlikely, that's all.

> NPRM 05-235 is about MORSE CODE TESTING, Jimmie, NOT just

Who made you the judge about what is "better", Len?

> is to give ALL > those interested in amateur radio the OPPORTUNITY to get into > it without that old, outdated, arbitrary manual test for > morsemanship.

All those interested have had the opportunity to "get into" amateur radio without a Morse Code test since February 14, 1991.

But you haven't taken advantage of that opportunity, Len. Nor of the opportunity that has existed since 1990 to get full privileges with only a 5 wpm code test.

> There will be NO effect on operating privileges of already-> licensed amateurs due to elimination of the morse code test.
> NONE>

Can you guarantee that?

And it's not just operating privileges that are effects of such a change.

Here's an analogy:

You've told us of your house on Lanark Street - how much you paid for it, how much it's worth now, the nearby gated community, etc.

I've never been to your house but I've been in the area. It's a safe bet that your area is mostly single-family houses built after WW2, with little or no commercial development. Also a safe bet that while there may not be many CC&Rs, the zoning probably prevents much diversity of development on your street. Little boxes on the hillside (actually at the foot of the hill...)

Now suppose someone bought some properties near you - say next door or across the street. And suppose they sought to tear down the existing houses and build new ones that would change things on Lanark Street. Suppose they wanted to put up multifamily townhomes, some as rentals and some as condos. Some retail space too. Of course that would probably take a zoning change.

Would you support and accept that sort of change, Len? After all, it would give a lot more people the opportunity to get into your neighborhood without the old, outdated, arbitrary necessity of a huge down payment and massive mortgage. It would be an end to the old arbitrary requirements of single-family houses, etc. It would not directly affect your house - you're already there, established, etc. The new rules would not touch your house. You wouldn't give up anything except your mental image of the neighborhood.

Would you oppose or support that change?

Or suppose a licensed radio amateur moved in next door and wanted to put up a few 70 foot towers with big beams (like K8MN's). Would that be OK with you?

Your postings here exceed mine in number and length, Len.
You're describing yourself, not me.

You're really emotionally invested in rrap....

Recommendation. And that NPRM wasn't about age requirements at all. Plus Reply Comments are about replying to someone else's comments, not about bringing up new issues for consideration long after the comment period was over.

In fact, your only filing on that NPRM was those reply comments, wasn't it? And despite your years of experience in computer-modem communications, you couldn't manage to submit via ECFS back then, even though thousands of us figured it out.

> That was over six years ago.

So what? You repeatedly bring up stuff that's much older and even less relevant.

> I have NOT pursued > that since except for the accusations leveled at me in > here.

What "accusations", Len? The facts were presented and you confirmed them. You even accused ARRL and some VEs of fraud and dishonest over the licensing of some young amateurs.

You weren't at the VE session, don't know any of the people involved,
and yet you accused others of fraud.

And you claimed that because, in your opinion, 6-year-olds could not understand the material on the test, no one under the age of 14 should be allowed to hold an amateur radio license.

That's a fur piece from "dropping it".

> The "Restructuring" Report and Order came out in

So?

"old highway"? The "information superhighway"?

Truth is, you've repeatedly defended your position on the issue.
You didn't "drop it".

Now you could come out and say it was a bad idea and that there should be no age requirements for an amateur radio license.

But I doubt you'll do that.
> "Sweetums,"

Who is "Sweetums", Len?

Why not? You do it all the time.

You do that already. I've never claimed any military service.

That would be never, Len. Because I don't claim "expertise" at anything.

I do know a few things, though, and it really seems to tick you off when one of your mistakes is pointed out. Like the in-service dates of Soviet Bear bombers....

Then you're saying there should not be any age requirement for an amateur radio license.

It's not all about you, Len.

Not by any reasonable definition of heckling.

Yet you kept on defending it.

Your defense of it is a lot more recent.

Not me. I just think it's a really bad idea.

Why, yes! I enjoy using Morse Code to communicate with hams of all ages. I've worked 10 year olds on Morse Code and 90+ year olds too. I've Elmered hams of all ages, too.

What matters to me is the person on the other end of the QSO, what they have to say, and how much fun the whole process is. The other ham's age is of vanishing importance to me.

> Does that satisfy some internal desires of yours?

Working other hams is a lot of fun for me. This weekend is the CW SS.
I intend to work a lot of other hams using Morse Code. For fun.

Who does? Do you?

I have enough. That's what's important. I'm also very wealthy in things that cannot be bought.

> Yup...and it shows you HATE professionals for some reason.

Not me. I am one!

Where?

I am a professional in electrical engineering. There's a lot more to EE than "electronics".

Why should I? Would it make any difference? Or would it simply be something else for you to insult and denigrate?

Perhaps it's time to repost your classic "sphincters post", where you denigrated and insulted the military service experiences of a US Coast Guard radio operator.

I didn't say that.

See? There you go. Gotta mention what you bought and how much it cost.

"personal worth" to be synonymous....

If it damages the amateur radio service, it affects me.

I'm not afraid of any retest, Len. You seem to be afraid of any test, though. Or any One that's accessible to anyone willing to look for it.

> How do you KNOW that all those in the grace period
> have NOT renewed?

By definition, a license in the grace period has not been\ renewed. If it were, it would be counted as a current license.

The source of these figures downloads the FCC database every day, and compiles the totals of licenses that are neither expired nor in the grace period. By comparing these numbers with those at hamdata.com for the same date, the approximate number of licenses in the grace period may be computed.

They're at least as accurate as any numbers you post here, Len. Probably much more accurate because there's no interpretation needed.

> WHY is it "informative" that you must continue to do > the "Speroni Stats" maneuver to "lump" the Technician

Because FCC has been renewing all Tech Pluses as Technician for more than 66 months now. An uninformed person (such as you, Len ;-) ) might misinterpret the big growth in the number of Technicians unless it were pointed out that the shrinkage in Tech Pluses is even greater.

The number of Tech Pluses and Techs are listed separately, too.

Note that the total number of Techs/Tech pluses has dropped by almost 16000 since May of 2000, and the percentage has dropped too.

Like it or not....

HamPoll is here in order to give amateurs a chance to speak for themselves, and in time to provide reasonably accurate and significant polling data on a variety of issues related to the amateur radio service.

You are welcome to browse the polling data we have, but we especially encourage US amateurs visiting here to register with thier callsign and vote in the HamPoll Polling Station.

Whether you come to browse, to discuss or submit new polls, or to tender your vote, be sure to visit regularly as new polls are included from time to time, and the poll data changes as more hams participate day to day.

Hey, Dude. It's already November.

NIM Busters will continue, but the location of the new board will be a closely held secret. According to the admin of the current board, Lloyd hasn't posted since last April. The posts allegedly by him are all by imposters.

The admin has not succeeded in dumping Wiseman in spite of eight months of trying, so the regulars will move to a new, secret board where Wiseman will not have access. The new board has added levels of security which will prevent uninvited posts from people like Wiseman, even if he does find its new location.

How do I know this? Simple: The new board has been in beta testing for the last eight weeks. That's why the NIM Busters board known to the public is receiving a much smaller number of posts than in the past. The regulars have gradually been invited to the new board and are posting there instead.

If you want access, install PGP on your computer, generate a key, and have your key signed by three other NIM Busters regulars. After that, you MAY be allowed to post to the new board.

Sorry, Woger. Your time is up.

If you were on active duty then you would know that moonlighting is -strongly- discouraged. In some units it's even prohibited by the commanding officer because the responsibilities of an outside job usually conflict with the responsibilities of the unit. But you didn't know that because you were never active duty; i.e, more proof from your own ignorant words.

> And you make reference as to what my "DOD" (properly DoD) record >states per my MOS's, but you and I BOTH know that that same record >shows nothing but active duty service (Delayed Entry >notwithstanding...)

Maybe you don't know -- your DOD (or DoD if you like) record doesn't specify. I mentioned that before: ".....but it doesn't distinguish between active or reserve." The reason is because military members frequently change from active to active reserve, to inactive reserve, to retired (in your dreams), etc, etc. The record states your total time, not how it was served. And BTW, your time in the delayed enlistment program isn't considered active -or- reserve (active -or-inactive). Read your contract if you don't believe me.

>Brothers/Sisters programs...?!?!

Yes, by the amount of responsiblity required of the job. Nobody cares if you don't show up to work at Taco Bell or miss choir practice. But an emergency room tech missing a shift can result in real problems.
Especially when that tech is in the military and suseptible to the possibility that liberty could be cancelled, the base locked down, or any of the other things that sometimes happen, without warning, that would prevent you from even giving notice of your impending absence.
As a Marine your primary obligation is to the Corps, and I don't think -any- hospital with an emergency room would hire a part-time EMT who is much more likely to miss a shift than a dedicated EMT whose primary obligation is to the hospital and patients. They might let you in as a candy-striper.....

to fall down and puke.

You have used "Semper Paratus" in many posts. For example:

==========
.....[nursing is] the one "technical occupation" that I have enjoyed (as both EMT and LPN) where more than one off my "projects" has returned to where I work and shook my hand and said "Thank you for helping to save my life."

Some occupation, huh?!

Semper Paratus

Steve Robeson, LPN
Chattanooga, TN
==========

You even explained why you used it:

"If having great respect for an organization (the United States Coast Guard, in this case) that goes so far out of it's way on a daily basis to save human lives makes me a "paramilitary wannabe", guilty as charged."

And when taken in context with the preceding post it also makes you a praise-seeking hero wannabe.

Keep dreaming, Dudly. I couldn't care less how bad you have screwed up your life -- it's what you claim to have done but haven't that hobbles
-your- horse.

So the fact that two-headed snakes have existed is proof that you have one? Go soak your head. I'm talking probability here, Dudly. So far your claims are so IM-probable that you defending them only makes the argument against you even stronger.

> Geeze, Frankie...That was a looooooooooooooooooooooong stretch,

Pottery, polishing rocks, building hot-rods..... those are "pursuits", Dudly. You claim to have successfully had two concurrent careers, both with very demanding and very conflicting obligations. Big difference.

> What part of MCO's were therein >violated? Other than during Typhoon Condition 1A on Okinawa, I never >spent one minute on Barracks Restriction, and even then THAT was
>"island wide".

That doesn't make sense -- the minute you didn't spend on barracks restriction was island wide? Think -before- you type, you fruitcake.

Anyway, you clearly don't understand the difference between liberty and restriction, something that is known by any active duty Marine (and probably known by active duty members of the other services as well). Like I said, Dudly -- the more you talk, the deeper you dig your hole.

> Frankie...You should try out for the part of the guy in the comic Grow up, "Major".

> Lastly...The Marine Corps, as do all the services, heavily recruit

Yes they do. Many reservists are former active duty Marines. Many active duty Marines are former reservists. Blah, blah, blah. What's your point?

> This is not something I made up, but a matter of public record and >USMC policy.

Where did I say anything different?

> I should know...I helped train Reservists at various times.

Gee, another claim about your military career. I wonder if I should give that one as much weight as I give the rest of your claims....

> So...that having been said, even if I HAD been a Reservist, I would

That's right. The only difference is that you, as a reservist, didn't have the same experiences as an active duty Marine. And active duty Marines didn't have the same experiences a you, a reservist. Too bad you couldn't be proud of that fact instead of trying to pass yourself off as something you never were -- an active duty Marine.

> And considering those same Reserve (and National Guard) forces are >carrying the same load as their active duty counterparts in Iraq right >now, your "suggestion" that I may have been a Reservist as a negativism >is ludicrous and assinine.

I have nothing against reservists. I -do- take issue with reservists who claim to be, or claim to have been, active duty when they weren't.
It's not the same and you know it. Because if you didn't know it then you wouldn't have tried to hide the fact that you spent your entire Marine "career" as a reservist.

What's wrong with being proud of who you are instead of trying to be someone you're not? It works for me.

I see the sentence with my name in it. I see the sentence which follows it. That is typical of your behavior. It is precisely the kind of thing I wrote about above. There is a very accurate profile of your likely actions toward those who disagree with you. Would you like to

It took an entire battalion of signalmen to do that, Len? All this Fine. I don't want to deflate his ego but when I saw a post from "RST

I've not noted many fabric surfaces on the aircraft I've seen in recent decades. Thanks for providing the information on the aircraft band.
Perhaps nobody here knew where the band could be found. :-)

It surely does. It pretty much sums up all of your imagining, guessing and assuming about what Steve has and hasn't done.

I can't yet figure your motivation but you've admitted being a screw up in the military. It looks as if you're out to smear the service of others for whatever reason. Most of us who served managed to get through a hitch without an Article 15, much less a court martial.

Tabulation in agreement with FCC ECFS as of 9 PM EDT 1 Nov 05.

Notes:

Notice of NPRM 05-143 appeared in Federal Register for 31 August and established official end of Comments as 31 October 2005 and official end of Replies to Comments as 14 November 2005. The left column indicates totals for ALL dates. Right column indicates all totals beginning 31 August 2005 to day of this scorecard.
It is unknown whether or not the FCC will consider Comments entered prior to 31 August 2005, hence the two column format used here.
Fixed-font spacing used throughout.

1. Includes duplicate postings from same individual, "joke" or "test" entries which do not have a valid address, or polemicizing a personal pet peeve which has nothing to do with the NPRM, individuals not understanding the scope and purpose of the NPRM, two foreign resident submissions, and six who were commenting on another matter having nothing to do with amateur radio regulations.

2. Includes only those who are whole-heartedly AGAINST the NPRM and against dropping any code testing.

3. Includes only those who are whole-heartedly FOR the NPRM and the abolition of the morse code test. NPRM itself
(first docket document on 15 July) is counted as a "for."

4. These are "in-betweeners" who wish to retain the code test for the "highest" class (Extra) but will accept eliminating the code test for other classes.

Percentages are calculated from Grand Totals less Indeterminates.

This date is the last official day for Comments. There may be additional entries made for 31 October by the FCC at a later date. Official end of Replies to Comments is 14 November.

The future of U.S. amateur radio is being made, like it or not.

Sigh...I'm familiar with reservists both as a soldier and as a civilian. The NBC news "fleecing of America" comes to mind on several reservist "training" sites. :-(

Quite true on Vinson. Outdated by now, of course. All of the SINCGARS-compatible radios have a different system that is muy robost. Those started becoming operational in 1989. Right now Harris Corporation is doing their Falcon
III handheld multi-band radio which is SINCGARS compatible.

I got a chance to see the (now rather aged) PRC-104 HF manpack under development at Hughes Ground Division. There's a few areas in that package which aren't what they could be but that little critter works just fine in the field. One of the first to use wideband frequency synthesis of the carrier in military portable environments.

There's a legend on the 'net that Helena Rubenstein (?) got into "making" the venerable R-390 receiver (developed by Collins Radio for the DoD) as a later second-source. They apparently wanted to diversify many years ago. They got one look at the complete set of production plans and said "no way!" To save legal fees, they managed to get the minimum of a 100 built units from elsewhere, made up some nameplates, stuck those on the back of the receiver. Don't know if that is true, but it makes a great story! :-)

"dishonoring" all other vets for joining in on Memorial Day

In reading of the latest suicide-killer William Freund, I

Maybe Dud has that. Newspaper reports say it is seldom detected in ordinary medical exams by ordinary MDs.

I keep thinking of Elfren Saldivar, dubbed "the Angel of Death" during his trial in Glendale, CA. NURSE Saldivar offed a couple dozen patients, not only in Glendale but in two other hospitals. The Glendale hospital had NOT done any checking of Saldivar's performance at those other hospitals!

Of course I knew it.

And I had the Commanding Officer's approval chit for off duty employment as was required by Marine Aircraft Group 16 policy at the time.

Sorry, SilliOne...Delayed entry WAS considered "reserve" time.

You make some suggestive comments yet don't answer the questions.

Why?

PLEASE CITE just ONE Marine Corps order (from 1986 through 1992) that allegedly "proves" I was unable/unauthorized to work part time as an EMT...JUST ONE.

No...

That's what you've implied...You've suggested that in 18 years (actually 14 at the time I obtained my initial EMT certification) that I SHOULDN'T have had any time or opportunity to be an EMT, and that in doing so, somehow "proved" that I was never on Active Duty...As if 140 hours of night classes over a four month period kept me from my offical duties..

I'm not the one with two court martials over his head, Frankie.

And as for the rest, I can see how a busted-back-to-boot-camp PFC would have a "problem" with a Marine who DID make it to Gunnery Sergeant and did so without so much as a single Article 15....

No...We HAVE "proven" my cowardly assertions since you won't "straight-up" answer the question.

Where, Frankie, has NO OTHER MARINE >>EVER<< worked a part time job, went to school off duty, followed "personal" pursuits that were not part-and-parcel of their USMC duties...?!?!

EVER?

"Go soak your head" is the BEST you can come up with, Frankie?

I did...very thoughtfully...The ONLY "barracks restriction" I was ever "on" was during island wide restrictions for Typhoon Condition 1A.

Sure I do. The POINT having been made that I never stood so much as one minute of any form of punishment in 18 years inn the Marines...

Can YOU say the same thing...?!?!

How's that?

So far, you're the one in "negative numbers", Frankie...

I'm doing just fine.

But YOU are the one making strange assertions unsubstantiated by facts, Frankie.

The POINT is that YOU seem to express duty as a Reservist as a negativism.

At every suggestion that I may have "only" been a reservist and at the point wherein you made inferences that duty as a Reservist was somehow less-than-adequate.

It doesn't matter what "weight" you give it, Frankie...

You were incompetent as a Marine when you were on active duty and you're incompetent to sit in judgement of anyone who was in the Marines.

Frank Gilliland has uttered yet another intentional lie.

Your words in this forum demonstrate otherwise.

(That's four)

Well that leaves out anyone in THIS forum.

Five

Being less that you can be worked for you. Two court martials prove it.

So...Frankie...Have any REAL proof of your "having been an EMT proves you were a Reservist" claim, or do we just get treated to another Lenniesque blustery diatribe?

I think just a few of his more colorful postings will set most of the Board members on thier ear laughing, Dave.

I've already had numerous professional, proactive relationships with several members of the Board including presentations before the Board in public session on scope-of-practice issues.

Nice shot, Markie...You told him...

And got both profanity and blasphemy in one line...How does that

BWAHAHAHAHA Lloyd! Bell South can advertise anywhere they damn well please, especially if they can't get enough linemen who stand up when they pee. So they come here to Glendale and advertise in the place where the most shemales will see it, the Shipwreck Lounge. I said that they move south after they get a job, but you missed it. Looks like you fucked up again!

I find some really hot dates in the Shipwreck Lounge myself. I moved to Glen Haven Avenue because a lot of shemales live on that street.

I doubt that President Carter had much to do with dropping (dumbing down) licensing requirements. In fact it is unlikely Carter even knew what ham radio was unless they could help him with 'killer rabbits'!

He may have been pres at the time but the FCC has a history of operating on their own.

Your spent $5,000.00 on audio equipment for an HF SSB 1-hour-per-week information bulletin? You built a "studio" for this? Down here we just tape Pasternaks newsline and transmit via the reverse autopatch.
Saved our $5,000.00 for processed agave juice.

Dudly gets himself in hot water and it's Dave to the rescue!

>I can't yet figure your motivation

I don't know why -- I've clearly stated my "motivation" several times in plain English.

> but you've admitted being a screw up >in the military. It looks as if you're out to smear the service of >others for whatever reason. Most of us who served managed to get

One more time, Dave: I wasn't exactly the 'model Marine', but I did my service and I did it well (despite Dudly's imagined version of the facts as recorded in my SRB). I am no less proud of my service than any other Marine. And like any other Marine, I find it reprehensible when someone like Dudly makes false claims about his "career", fudging
the truth in order to get a little more praise.

So you never got caught doing anything wrong. Hooray for you.
Something to be proud of, I suppose. However, I have a slightly different value system. I don't rest my laurels on never having done anything wrong (which I don't think anyone can honesty claim).
Instead, I list my accomplishments by the challenges I have faced and overcome, whether they were caused by my own actions or by circumstances beyond my control. And believe me, I have done both.

Dudly said it himself: It's easy to get through the military without so much as an Article 15 -- just follow orders. Now that's fine for a reservist, where the orders given aren't much of a challenge. It's easy to blindly follow orders. But that isn't always the case on active duty. Maybe you forgot Abu Graib, or that incident where the soldiers refused to make an unnecessary supply run without sufficient armor..... or even the Iran-Contra scandal. When the orders are wrong or illegal, as happens from time to time, it's -not- easy to do the -right- thing and challenge authority. I consider that to be one of my accomplishments.

I also consider it an accomplishment to have fulfilled my military obligation after two courts-martial and the constant denigration from others that resulted from them, a tactic that Dudly is trying to use. What Dudly doesn't realize is that he can say nothing that I haven't heard before and overcome. I proved them wrong and I'm proud of that fact. So when Dudly (and now yourself) try to use the same demeaning tactics I can only laugh.

Dave, I have no beef with you. I didn't feel it necessary to give you -any- sort of explanation but I did anyway. If it wasn't enough, or if you can't understand it, tough shit. But do you really feel the need to defend Dudly -- a retired Marine Gunny, a CAP Major, a TN State Guardsman, and a veteran of seven hostile actions -- against me, a shitbird PFC? If you do then you are only hurting Dudly's case, not helping it. If you are going to stick up for Dudly, fine. As far as I'm concerned, you two love-birds can row your boat out into the wash together and do whatever it is that makes you two happy.

What in the world was THAT...?!?!

Were you saying something about forgers? Supported by whom?

If you were refering to YOU, HOW CAN ANYONE TELL...?!?! You have half a dozen screen names you DO use...How is anyone other than you supposed to keep track of what really is you and what isn't...?!?!

Markie, let's understand ONE thing here so your feelings won't get hurt later, nor will you be able to hide behind your usual "victim" role...

First of all, all other things notwithstanding, I serious doubt you're THAT stupid as to try an involve a Board of Nursing in an Amatuer Radio discussion group.

That having been said, however, I will also temper it with you've fooled me with your stupid stunts before.

You seem to think that YOU are the ONLY person with any legal avenues open to you.

Ten seconds after I get ANY kind of letter from the TN State Board of Nursing, I WILL be discussing a civil case against you with my attorney and I WILL do my best to LEGALLY deprive you of every last dollar and real property that I can recover from such a case. And if I never see a single penny but have your credit reports showing the judgements as "unpaid", then I will still consider that a win.

So...You can continue this fantasy if you choose, as you have the right to do so, but make absolutely NO ERROR in assessing my determination to make sure you pay heavily for it.

We were discussing your attempts to censor any resposnes, Markie.

And I suggest you re-read the above paragraph...And also discuss this with your "wife", since it will also impact her welfare.
> > Good luck!

Markie, Markie, Markie...

More profanity...or "suggestion" of it...

The POINT of the "subject" is to make you realize that YOU are not immune from the legal process yourself.

This is NOT going to be some "deep pockets" contingency fee eligible event that you are going to embroil yourself in...No lawyer is going to take this on "just for fun". Especially when they get a load of what I have to show them...

So...Up to you, Sport...You can keep this masquarade up only so long and keep fooling yourself about your fantasized outcomes......After that, it's going to cost you REAL money...

Steve, K4YZ

What attack?

YOU'RE the one with this "board of nursing" charade to cover your ego for not getting what you want.

And If I want to create 1000 new threads today, I'll do it...Just as YOU could if you wanted to.

Two courts martial show me that "I wasn't exactly the model Marine" may not be an appropriate phrase.

There are oodles of folks who are proud of records which others would find to be less than stellar.

> And like any other Marine, I find it reprehensible

So far, we have you guessing and making accusations. There is no "Dudly".

> So you never got caught doing anything wrong. Hooray for you.
> Something to be proud of, I suppose.

Is that how your value system works? You think that I never got caught doing something wrong? The fact is, I never did anything which could nail me with Article 15 punishment, much less get me court martialed.

> However, I have a slightly > different value system. I don't rest my laurels on never having done

I didn't write that I've never done anything wrong. I wrote that I'd not done anything which could result in Article 15 punishment or a court martial.

> Instead, I list my accomplishments by the challenges I have faced and > overcome, whether they were caused by my own actions or by

We're different. I try not to find myself in situations where I have to overcome something caused by me.

I was never a reservist and I didn't blindly follow orders. There isn't any "Dudly". Can you find it in yourself to use the man's name?

So both of your courts martial are cases in which you were only trying to do the right thing?

> I also consider it an accomplishment to have fulfilled my military > obligation after two courts-martial and the constant denigration from

There isn't any "Dudly". That is your attempt at denigrating someone who wasn't court martialed. His name is Steve.

> What Dudly doesn't realize is that he can say nothing that I haven't > heard before and overcome. I proved them wrong and I'm proud of that Both of your courts martial were overturned?

> So when Dudly (and now yourself) try to use the same demeaning

You blew in here touting the wonders of CB radio in an amateur radio newsgroup, started a game of "I'll bet he never...." in regards to Steve and you don't expect to be demeaned? I guess you'll have to get used to it.

> Dave, I have no beef with you. I didn't feel it necessary to give you

You should regroup, rethink your motives and gather some facts if you think Steve, not "Dudly" has manufactured anything about his record. If you can provide proof and feel the need to do so, post it. Otherwise your rants have no meaning, especially here.

> If you do then you are only hurting Dudly's case, not

Well, there's one man's view.

> If you are going to stick up for Dudly, fine. As far as I was Air Force. I don't row. My dad was Navy though--a Normandy Invasion vet. He always told me that the reason there were two sailors on each landing craft was that one piloted the craft and the other was to chase the Marines down the ramp and onto the beach.

My experience with Marines has been with those on MSG duty. When the Gunny would come to the Comm center for message traffic, I'd provide it and even read it to him if necessary.

Frankie?

And as for the temperature of the water, I'd say your feet are a few degrees closer to boiling than mine.....

No, you did NOT "do it well", save perhaps in YOUR imagination.

Marines with TWO courts martials in one tour are NOT "good"
Marines.

> I am no less proud of my service than any other Marine.

You should be...you were incompetent as a Marine...Competency as a Marine does not limit itself to how skilled or knowledgeable you may have been in your MOS.

And HAD you been a "good Marine", you'd know.

> And like any other Marine, I find it reprehensible

What fudging?

What you MEAN is that you were completely incapable of operating within the "value system" of what it was to be a Marine, but now you try some boohoo about how more challenging it was for you.

> Dudly said it himself: It's easy to get through the military without > so much as an Article 15 -- just follow orders.

I questioned orders on numerous occasions. But that's part of that "value system"...Knowing how to work within the system.

You were stupid.

Twice.

> Now that's fine for a > reservist, where the orders given aren't much of a challenge.

And again an out-and-out misrepresentation of the character of service of the Reserve Forces of the United States...

What part of what the Reserves are doing today is any less challenging than what the active duty guys are doing?

Indeed...they have it harder...Taken from homes and 'real jobs' to fight in the desert.

> It's easy to blindly follow orders.

And it's even easier to make up silly stories like yours.

All you've done is make a laughing stock out of your "arguments"
here, Frankie...

You were incompetent as a Marine. You are where incompetent Marines SHOULD be...in civilian life with two courts martials to live with.

Frankie trying to soft-soap Dave since just last night he was telling "everyone" that "no one" here was "on my side".

That having now been proven false, Frankie tries his own version of "spin".

> But do you really feel the need

A liar's a liar, Frankie...You're a very determined one, but a liar none the less.

> If you do then you are only hurting Dudly's case, not helping it.

Ahhhhhhh...Just like President Nixon's "Silent Majority" trick,
Frankie...?!?!

> If you are going to stick up for Dudly, fine. As far as > I'm concerned, you two love-birds can row your boat out into the wash

So here we have it, folks...

Frankie "comes over" from the CB NG for no other purpose than to take up for Markie and Company against a former Marine since he knows just enough of "the lingo" to sound impressive. It's OK for "them" to go 5-to-1 on me.

He is, however, a twice disgraced loser who didn't have the dignity or strength of character to get through ONE tour of duty without being court martialed TWICE.

He is "all about" teaming up with Lennie, Markie, etc, but let someone say something in MY support and they are "defending" me, as if words of support for me were verbal herpes.

I wonder what it is about Dave saying something that makes Frankie worry about the possible odds now being 5:2 instead of 5:1...?!?!

More substantiation of my claim that he's a coward.

Steve, K4YZ

Indeed, when Georgie boy said lets go guys we were there with you... getting friendly fired at.... lol. The thing is not being American i wouldnt really follow your presidents with as much interest as you guys which is fair enough as you wouldnt follow the prime ministers of the UK with any real interest.

There was an interesting piece in the paper today about Americans being the most un-observant country of all to do with happenings outside the US because there was a survey to ask people in different Malls who a certain picture was of. It was Camilla Parker Bowles but hardly anyone knew her... which doesnt suprise me as who would be interested in her???? now if you were to say Diana Spencer most people would know.

I knew Regan was President in the 80's but i didnt know when he came to power. As it didnt really affect me i never took much interest.

This is how the fight for Legal CB in the UK went. It want until nearing the end that Margaret Thatcher told William Whitelaw to do something about it as it was becoming a bit of a hot potatoe. With all the things going on around the world and in the UK i doubt if CB was even an issue in her mind.

This is but one of Frankie's sillier suggestions...that having a part time job/pursuit is somehow "evidence" of having NOT done the things I claim...

> I know it is legal to "moonlight" in the army it take a slain forest > of paperwork to do but so does almost evrything in the army

Not so in the Marine Corps. I had to sign a statement that stated my USMC duties must never be compromised, and I was given a very short list of "no no's" for part time work...Law enforcement, any "job" which was in conravention to any local, state or federal law, and partisan politics wherein my status as a member of the Armed Forces may lend the appearence of that branch having any preference for any political party or candidate.

Took all of a day to walk the chit (A Naval term for a "permission slip...Not an abbreviation for excrement) through. No big deal.

Your buddy Frankie is the one short on facts here, Markie...

For two days now he's been insinuating that having a part time job is "evidence" that I was not on active duty and was "nothing more" than a reservist.

How assinine.

So now YOU are calling Dave a "nobody"..?!?!

THAT'S FREAKIN' HILLARIOUS!

Please, Markie...provide us with some references to various Amateur Radio related discussions in Amateur Radio related journals that highlight you, Frankie, Brain, or any of the rest of your

On the OTHER hand, I can find quite a few articles in various publications over the last 10 years that mention Dave Heil in nothing

Sure it is!

We Frankie's ADMISSIONS that he was COURT MARTIALED not once, but TWICE!

That's the same as YOU getting hauled into General Sessions Court, Markie...And Frankie's probably lucky that the Armed Forces' practice is to just let idiots like him go at the end of their enlsitment rather than putting them in the brig...It's far chaper to do it taht way...And he now has two FEDERAL convictions on his record.

I said he has a lot of room where it comes to him being "proud" of what he did in the Marines...

Markie, BY HIS OWN ADMISSION he was court martialed. A court martial is the epitome of proof that FRANK GILLILAND was the one with the "value systems" deficiencies.

How is YOUR lack of attention to detail somehow attended to some

No, it's not.

However I will have copies of your posts wherein you try to get various 'waivers' for the Morse Code test from an ALLERGIST...

Your only "disability" is being lazy and stupid.

Like I said, Markie...you go right ahead...And if I may suggest, start adjusting your domestic budget right now to accomodate those legal fees. Most lawyers start around $50 to $75 and HOUR for their services after the initial consultation, and it goesnowhere but up from there.

There's no "issue" here, twitless.

Frankie claimed my part time job was "evidence" that I was not an active duty Marine.

That was ludicrous on the face of it...However HIS refusal to cite even one MCO of the period that said "you can't be an EMT while you're in the Marine Corps" pretty well proves MY assertion that he's full of your "bovine excrement"...

> if you were presueing something on the side say so, don't go about how > moonlighting is discouraged

(1) I already stated, YEARS AGO, that I worked part time as an EMT in an ER...

(2) >>I<< am not the one going on about "moonlighting" being "discouraged"...That's in your's and Frankie's ballpark! I already stated that I complied with Group Orders for off duty employment.

> deal with the issue

I did.

> but then you can't deal with issues it seems

Sure I did.

> >> I know it is legal to "moonlight" in the army it take a slain forest

Right there you admit that moonlighting is acceptable, then I went on to say....:
> > Not so in the Marine Corps. I had to sign a statement that stated Issue "dealt with".

> admitng that Franks is correct in his base charge

"admitting" "Frank"

No, I did nothing of the sort.

Frankie claimed that by having "admitted" to being an EMT I was somehow "proving" that I was "only" a reservist. Nothing of the sort is even remotely factual.

> BTW so much for strongly discouraged

It was NOT "strongly discouraged" when I was on active duty, except, as previously noted, where it conflicted with official duties.

I already addressed that.

Yep.

Like his "facts" about how my working part time as an ER tech
"proved" that I was "only" a reservist.

"evidence" "of" "evidence [again]" "errors"

No, it's nothing of the kind.

And what "equipment" errors?

You and Toiddie are the only one in this forum with "equipment errors".

"proving"

It was nothing of the kind.

And you broke your own "don't assume" rule...And it bit you.

I have.

And as I have said before...Just because you can't/won't acccept them does not negate them as such.

Betty Ford sent out "breakers" from the White House during the 1970s under the CB handle "First Mama".
Former President Jimmy Carter's wife Rosalynn wanted to talk on CB radio in the later half of the 1970's but she didn't have a CB radio license.
President Carter quickly got the FCC to change the law so that anyone could instantly use as their CB callsign - K , their first and last initials and their zipcode. Shortly thereafter the CB licensing requirement was dropped altogether in the U.S.
CB frequencies and any other nearby frequencies quickly proceeded to go to hell in a handbasket.

changed the name of THIS thread...

Better explain the part to her about any charges YOU make I get to respond to with charges of my own...And I will do so in civil court.

"social"

Well good for her. It's good to have some character values.

But those character values don't digest very well, and I doubt they buy a whole lot of heating oil or keep the elements off of your heads.

> but no bill will go a begging for it

They will eventually. And at rates starting at $50/hour and going up, how long will it be before you're looking to refinance the house to pay for it?

And BTW, Markie...When I WIN the house, YOU still have the mortgage to pay!

It won't be MY luxuries that get restricted. I already have a lawyer on retainer.

Nope.

Promises. You try to compromise my professional license and I will make it hard for you to eat and stay warm.

There's no "lying" here.

I've very clearly stated that I will use every last LEGAL means at my disposal in dealing with you, Markie...And that means EXPENSIVE for YOU.

Hi there
I was diagnosed dyslexic, many years ago, have largely learned to live with it by now (I am 34 yo and have a BA) Having gotten back to dealing Ham Radio, I am back to dealing with Morse to at least recieve
a bit of and to docment today, my dyslexia, which would allow both various changes in the Testing requirements. I need refences to to help point my doctor ( an allergist) toward a test or three that would support the fact that I still have dyslyexia today (FCC dysbility requierments don't seem to realize that some things really don't get much better with time) Idealy one that will lend some support to the idea that I still have it, but are not too expensive to for him to order given to me

Nope...Not at all...

His court martials were keynote in his less-than-honorable discharge. He claims it was "upgraded"...but an "upgraded" discharge STILL means he was DISHONORABLY DIScharged.

Sorry, Markie...I've already posted the platoon I went to bootr camp in and when...A simple matter to look at the "graduation" pictures and see my name and picture.

Again...You claim "fudging", but when pushed to prove it, you just claim it's bull#### and you "fluch" the rest...

That's an admission that you have no facts.

Care to comment on the conduct and character of ham radio operators on 75 meters, after 10 pm ????????????
And while your are at it, fill us in on approximately how many turf wars, on the average, are currently raging on 75 meters?
And dont wimp out and tell us this happens only occasionally,

cause we know better.

It's the on-going Pro-Code-Test-Advocate Morsemen alliance working hard with the PCTA Double Standard. :-)

Davie KNOWS things. He worked in the Department of State!
He served IN a country at WAR! [busy doing MARS at Tan
Son Nhut]

>I don't know why -- I've clearly stated my "motivation" several times

Irrelevant, Frank. Davie DEMANDS MOTIVATION (when he runs out of valid/coherent replies).

Davie DEMANDED that I "should" have gotten an amateur radio license BEFORE EVER getting into professional radio. Implied that it was the proper thing to do...no doubt showing MOTIVATION to HIM. Tsk, the U.S. Army didn't know that...

>> but you've admitted being a screw up

Frank, I've NO problems with your pride and espirit d'corps about the USMC. It shows. It also shows you have no qualms about stating what you did without embellishments, embroidery, or exaggeration. You are telling it like it is.
Davie and Dudly sin by omission, leaving out the details of their exploits.

Davie was HIGHLY CRITICAL of MY service in the Army, of NOT being "at war" or even IN a country at war. When I voluntarily enlisted on 13 Mar 52, there was a very hot war going on in Korea. The Army didn't send me there directly, stationed me in Tokyo beginning in early February, 1953, a sort-of cease fire then in Korea. The formal Truce period began in July, 1953. [that "Truce" period has NOT ended...technically, a state of war still exists with North Korea 52 years later]

Why is Davie so critical? Tsk, a long time ago in here I mentioned being assigned to work at the (then) 3rd largest Army radio station in ACAN (the worldwide Army Command and Administrative Network...later called "StarCom" and then Defense Communications System). HF radio. HF was the old mainstay of long-distance message traffic in the military.
Three dozen transmitters on HF with power outputs of 1 KW to 40 KW, operating 24/7. [Dave said "you never worked 24/7" but we did...all over the Pacific] Thing was that this 3rd largest station was far bigger than ANY State Department foreign station of any time in State's existance and even helped carry State message traffic on some of the circuits. Davie said "you don't know anything about what State Department does!" but I did...as did everyone who was INTO the ACAN and DID carry some of their message load]

Davie got on a toot, adjusted his truss, and couldn't stop condemning me in here ever since. Doesn't matter what the subject is, Davie is so damn critical of being "opposed" in anything he says that he does the "revenge" bit all the time
now. He is a MORSEMAN and, according to him, NO radio amateur shows "motivation" unless they love, honor, and obey morsemanship.

>So you never got caught doing anything wrong. Hooray for you.

>circumstances beyond my control. And believe me, I have done both.

That's the way it is in the military. One seldom gets a "choice" on what to do. Follow orders, etc.

Davie worked for the Department of State. "Following orders," then Secretary of State Colin Powell (under President Bush the 2nd] told the world that "Saddam Hussein has Weapons of Mass Destruction" thereby "justifying a war" in Iraq. [Powell had been Chief of Staff of the military under President Bush the 1st] Over 2000 service personnel killed since, absolutely NO "weapons of mass destruction" have been found in Iraq. Has the Department of State taken back Powell's public statement? No. Has Davie ever taken back a single personal insult thrown at others (many have been thrown)? No.

"Lessons learned?" Maybe.

>Dudly said it himself: It's easy to get through the military without

Good on you, Frank.

Davie won't let up on you, though. You see, he was IN a country at war (busy killing commies with his MARS code key?) and knows ALL about following orders. [the Vietnam War ended 30 years ago] We all have to follow DAVIE's "orders." Especially the one on MOTIVATION.

The best Dudly the Imposter has come up with is "he was in 'seven hostile actions'!" Dud has NEVER said the WHEN or WHERE of those infamous "seven hostile actions." We must all honor and praise Dud for his valor and heroism or forever be recipients of emotional exaggerated personal insults.

>I also consider it an accomplishment to have fulfilled my military

Dudly doesn't understand that because his mindset works in some strange personal fantasy via his computer. He lives by exaggerated emotional phrases (most praising himself) and trying to do a snow job (badly) on others about his "accomplishments."

Davie is probably just looking for a word fight with his perceived "enemies." He is of a control-freak kind and does NOT like ANYONE telling him "no" or what to do. He MUST "win" these word fights and be "in the right."

>Dave, I have no beef with you. I didn't feel it necessary to give you

I suggest they both go see the premiere of the new film "Jarhead"
(as a couple). They can both get some emotional espirit d'corps.
Dudly can use the film's fiction for better embroidery of his "hostile actions." Davie can get the emotional thrill of doing battle "in-country" that ended over three decades ago. That will get them all fired up to throw more hissy fits against other veterans of the U.S. military who don't agree with their personal opinions.

Pity the FCC then...they regulate and enforce ALL civil radio in the United States, including amateur radio. Absolutely none of the staff nor commissioners are required to be granted any amateur radio license in order to regulate and enforce.

Tsk, tsk, tsk...I'm just trying to eliminate the morse code test from United States amateur radio regulations. According to the United States Constitution (First Amendment), all citizens have the RIGHT to free speech in the USA.

Tsk, tsk. Davie can't "impress" people as he wishes.

I've never said what you think I did. I explained it several times...but your mind can't grasp that, can it?

I explained that station ADA was operating "24/7" meaning (in colloquial use) around-the-clock, every day of the week. You said that "was never done." It was. It was done on a FAR LARGER scale than any MARS facility anywhere. ADA did carry MARS TTY traffic on a second-priority basis when the primary circuit wasn't busy.

I explained the RESPONSIBILITY of team leaders in keeping the transmitters up and operating, one part of the entire operation, but you insist on word-twisting to suit your savage beast within that wants to fight. All you wish to do is denigrate anyone who did MORE in REAL HF radio than you did. Tsk, tsk.

Damn straight. LCie4 IS a very nice program for quickly and accurately synthesizing (designing) and analyzing a passive L-C filter of lowpass, highpass, bandpass, or bandstop configuration.
The user can optionally change component values, modify Q of inductors or capacitors, do printouts of schematics or analysis results (or store them in a file), analyze input and output impedances in lieu of normal decibel insertion loss, phase change, or group delay. It's been proven in real hardware results that came out exactly as predicted.

You aren't involved in general aviation. You have NO business with general aviation let alone private flying. Why are YOU being critical of something you aren't even close to being involved in?

Why are YOU being critical of someone else's website to ME?

You don't even live in California. You have NO business with any California elections of any kind. Why do you give a shit of any elections of governors in California or state politics?

>> One >> of the neat things they do is what I would term "SURFACE MOUNT

Tsk, tsk, tsk. There are tens of thousands of general aviation aircraft having "fabric" covering in United States registry alone. That YOU "haven't seen them" doesn't mean they exist. In a half hour's drive from my residence, I can go to two major airports and one air park that have well over a thousand such "fabric" covered aircraft.

You said nothing about "surface mounting," indicating you are unable to perceive any humor (as in "SMD" now the common method of electronics hardware construction) or the fact that MOST of a general aviation aircraft structure UNDER the skin is largely empty. Any antenna can thus be mounted on the surface of a non-conductive skin and be largely unaffected on characteristics in that position. Rather basic EM theory involved there, but meaningless to those who will not bother to think about basic radio theory.

>Thanks for providing the information on the aircraft band.
>Perhaps nobody here knew where the band could be found.

YOU have NO BUSINESS with general aviation concerns, are NOT INVOLVED. It is no surprise that those who are NOT INVOLVED would be ignorant of technical details. Amateur radio is NOT INVOLVED with the international civil aviation band in VHF or the specific frequencies for that in the HF spectrum.

If you have any more questions, don't be afraid to show your ignorance. You haven't yet.

With warmest, best regards,

LenAnderson@ieee.org

Sounds like sour grapes on your part.

The actual count of individuals commenting showed that once duplicates and nonresponsive filings were removed, 55% of those commenting support at least a Morse Code test for Extra. Only 45% support the NPRM, with its complete removal of Morse Code testing.

A few days ago, you wrote:

"3. The attitude towards morse code testing in the U.S.
amateur community has been CHANGING all along...AWAY from the old, Old, OLD standards and practices." - Len Anderson

But the filings on WT 05-235 show that the majority (55%!) of those who commented want at least some code testing. That majority is almost identical to those supporting more than one code test speed back in 1998.

Another quote from what you wrote a few days ago:

"That seems to piss you off greatly and makes you petulant, whiny, and accusatory. Tsk." - Len Anderson

A perfect lead-in to the following:

> Must be wonderful to exist in such deep > delusions of grandeur,
> very satisfying, off in a wonderland of > their own fantasies
> of self-importance and Greatness. <shrug>

It's interesting that you will go on and on and on
about the motivations of people you've never met, but you won't tell us your motivations for changing the regulations of the Amateur Radio Service.
Which is a radio service you are not involved in.

nice to see the ARRL can whip it some of it memebrs into a lather

and of course your logica is Flawed in suggesting that all Ham favor coded extra oppose Code free general making the No code position clearly the purality

and indeed the coded extra support just shows the foolish ness of the Procode side

if there is any need for code testing at HF it applies to the general
as well as the Extras

so the Procode side merely shows itself as being for restriction whad enough flushing the restN

Sorry, Steve...Several issues.

First of all, >>>YOU<<< had made the wager across state lines. I did the legal and honorable thing; I didn't accept it.

Secondly, I did not accept the wager nor ask you to mail it to me. I actually forbid you to mail anything to me.

Lastly, what I did ask is that you donate your wager to the 10th District QSL Buro since you have denigrated all 10th District amateurs ("ZEROES") and the corpse of W0EX in an effort to get a laugh. That is the least you can do for 10-Landers. Donations are allowed to cross state lines, aren't they?

Again, further demonstration that you would not only wiggle your way out as predicted, but you make accusations as you do do. Not that that fact surprises anyone.

Best of Luck. bb

yep. see a lot of that going on: government, news media, etc.... :(

why can't folks just stick to real facts and at least some semblance of the truth? guess they have to lie a lot to make things sound better, huh?

I'm free to reject the implication that I'm supposed to know who "Jim" "RST-Engineering" is. As Leonard H. Anderon pointed out, I have no business in civil aviation and no business in California politics. I like it that way.

Lots of people deciding the outcome of the NPRM are not involved "in"
amateur radio.

Subject: It's Time To Demand A Re-Vamp of the FCC
Reply to Author | Forward | Print | Individual Message | Show original

After careful consideration of several events lately, I think it's time to start approaching our representatives and demand that a "kinder, gentler" FCC
be replaced by the autocratic nonsense that proliferates today.

The FCC of today is a joke. In this authors opinion, it has a long way to go to pull itself out of the shoulder-shrugging, responsibility shirking,
hand-washing, pass-the-buck attitude of the 70's and 80's.

First of all, the below cited item is one of the "could have said yes but said no "because we can"" instances where the FCC is just a bit too impressed with itself to cooperate with the users of the spectrum.

QUOTE: (from ARNewsline)

THE 2002 WINTER OLYMPICS: FCC SAYS NO TO SPECIAL CALL SIGN

An idea for a special events call sign to celebrate the 2002 Winter Olympics has drawn a negative response from the FCC. Tom Schaefer, NY4I, of Sandy,
Utah, had requested that the agency allow amateurs Utah hams to substitute the number 2002 or 02 for the 7 in their callsign. This, for the time period preceding and up to though the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City.
But after mulling it over for a few months the Schaefer says the agency responded with a definite no:

UNQUOTE

Never mind that even third-world nations do that very thing (allow temproary changes in calls for Olympic events, or that it would have not required anything more than a blanket STA for the period requested...Heck no...Why allow Amateurs to celebrate one of the truly (or at least as close as it will ever get) de-politicised international events that we can take pride
in? ESPECIALLY in the wake of recent events... ! ! !

Example: "We, the FCC, hereby allow any licensed Amateur Radio Operator living within the State of Utah to substitute the figures "2002" for the number
"7" in thier callsign for the period of (dates of the event) in recognition of the Olympics. Operators residing in Utah with a numeral other than "7" may substitute thier numeral with the original numeral plus "02", ie K4YZ would be K402YZ. Only stations with a permanent mailing address in Utah may participate. Have a nice day".

See how easy that was? Took some GS-5 stenographer 2 minutes to type up and another 30 minutes to get posted to the Federal Register or other authorized media.

Second is my aversion to the FCC being allowed to exert it's Victorian
opinions on who they consider to be of "good character" to be a "Commission Licensee"...I speak of persons who may have commited a crime in the past, NOT related to radio, and are now prohibited or are sanctioned in thier quest for a license, regardless of which radio service it may be in.

I was always of the opinion and understanding that once time was served, one's "debt to society" was paid and they were reassimilated into that society.
We are obviously NOT that society if we continue to punish people AFTER their time is served.

Next is my concern on the Agency's obvious lack of concern on maintaining a balance between the needs of ALL citizens versus corporations which would seek to make a profit from the finite resources of the electromagnetic spectrum. Again, this author does not believe that the FCC always acts in the best interests of the citizenry, but rather manufacturers and other corporate entities who can talk the smoother line.

Evidence the FRS and MURS services, the 220-222mHz debacle, and the recent attempt to liberalize Part 15 radiation limits. NONE of these acts were mandated by the needs of industry to meet an ongoing consumer need...they were done to provide the opportunity to CREATE a market for thier wares.

THAT is wrong.

Next, I would like to know how the FCC comes up with these horrific fines.
While I will be the first to demand that violators be punished and sanctioned,
even those acts should be within reason and by the order of a court AFTER due process of law...NOT because the FCC says "Because I Said So"....NAL's are
un-Constitutional, in my non-law-school opinion.

Lastly, I object in no uncertain terms to the passing of responsibility of radiocommunication regulatory enforcement to agencies OTHER than the FCC or other appropriately trained federal agency. (ie: local police or sheriff's agencies) Yes, local police should have the authority to intervene in cases where a CLEAR AND PRESENT DANGER exists...to me, this means some jerk jamming
local emergency services, navigation aids or law enforcement communications, or being able to take action against persons who are using radio to commit felonies or actively harass other citizens. This would be no more different than a cop arresting someone who just buzzed the Mayor's house. The FAA regulates avaition, but no one would dare suggest that a threat to safety was inappropriate for local law enforcement to take action on.

As much as I would like to see the "freeband" mess cleaned up,
the passing of laws that allows local law enforcement to do this is wrong. As pointed out by others, it is just one more obligation that already over-burdened officers must now familiarize themselves with, and leaves the door open for misunderstanding and confusion with law abiding users of the radio spectrum.

There are other matters that I see occuring with the FCC that give me cause, both as a licensee and as a citizen, to be concerned for the welfare of spectrum management within the United States. It's time to clean house.

Possible. But Steve did attempt to use his professional credentials to put people on "Persons of Interest" lists in other states, states where he isn't licensed. Recall the "Dialing..." post?

Sounds like there is a lot of slop in the medical community. No

Steve, you really, really hate it when others behave as you do. Don't sweat it, though. Few have the complete lack of conscience that it takes to keep it up for very long.

Charade?

You just might be making the "Nurses of Interest" list. I wouldn't want to be in your white loafers.

When I was first on my own I lived in Florida and I met a 37 year old blonde who hung out in the neighborhood bar and she took a liking to me. A little while later I found out that she not only hung out there but that she was hung if you get my drift. Then before anything could happen that shemale moved to Glendale, WV and I missed her and worried a lot about was I gay? So I went to WV and found her at the Shipwreck Lounge on Ohio street by the river.

I felt a lot better after she proved to me that I was a lesbian because lesbians like naked girls.

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact.

It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him. They may be able to help him restore his self respect and dignity so he stops posting this drunken garbage on the internet.

There are no tests your allergist could use.

If you want the question answered, you need to go see a licensed psychologist or licensed school psychologist. "licensed" is key.

Not awfully expensive, and should get you good answers.

If a tiny Johnson is what you have, a tiny Johnson is what you use. You have to work with what you've got. I'm sure that Len's Johnson has been gathering dust for some years now though.

I'm not Davie and there is no Dudly. I've spoke very little about my military service. I didn't stay for a career. Perhaps you'd like to do a little guessing and see if I made the whole thing up, Frank. Maybe Tsk, tsk, tsk...another Dudly type posting...you "know someone" who is "better" yet won't reveal this expert? :-)

What's to "analyze?" It's called READING, Jimmie. Even children can do that! :-)

Let's see...up to the end of 31 October there were 3,680 filings of which 240 were of the "indeterminate" kind. That's about 6.5 percent (only two digits used, can't use any "illusions of accuracy" with you, can we?). The other three categories were pretty well UN-ambiguous on deciding either YES to the NPRM, NO to the NPRM, or "let's keep it for Extra."

You need "experts in analysis" to divine the "true meaning" of those filings? I guess so...anything to try your damndest to fudge, alter the percentages in favor of pro-code. Tsk.

By the way, I don't know if the FCC uses "percentages" or not.
I used them to get a clearer picture of the total of opinions.
You dislike that. Obviously, since the comment period start showed that MORE were in favor of the NPRM than against.

I'm not surprised that you take your attitude, Jimmie.

I started this "computer-modem" think in early December, 1984. The Internet didn't go public until 1991. Have you seen any registry of domain names recently? No? You think it is "easy" to find something specific even with a search engine? You must. Or you are so damn petulant about this that you have to sit in here and heckle, heckle, heckle
about minutae just to satisfy your own wounded whatever...

As an attachment to THREE filings on WT Docket 05-235, Jimmie.

Lord knows few can tell YOU anything you don't want to hear!

>Your posts here are full of your ideas about How Amateur Radio >Should Be.

No. Most of my postings in this newsgroup are in response to the petulant little "I know what is best for ham radio" control-freaks, most of whom seem to be mighty macho morsemen.

>Your comments to FCC are full of your ideas about >How Amateur Radio Should Be.

MOST of my filings to the FCC have been about MORSE CODE TESTING, Jimmie. The code test is essentially about GETTING INTO amateur radio HF privileges. Long ago I started communications on HF without a single requirement to know or test for morse code and did it LEGALLY. You've never fully explained why the artificiality of testing for morsemanship is so damn necessary for amateur operations (you think you have but you are only parroting your conditioned thinking imposed by long-ago morsemen).

kind of "tool" to rationalize his snarling?

No, sweetums, I said I am used to receiving heckling, catcalls, and booing from the peanut gallery. I still am.
Here you are doing just that.

BBS (a social BBS headquartered in North Hollywood, CA).
Lynzie Flynn Zimmerman organized monthly get-togethers

Fun thing to do, get together socially with all the folks
one "knew" only by their messages.

Tsk, tsk, tsk...you still want to play games, ey? :-)

Why don't you just reveal this "website" and be done with it? If it is "so much better" than what I've done, then others will obviously see so! There you go, automatic triumph for your nasty little petulance! :-)

"All the world's a stage"...and Jimmie is the only one in the "audience!" :-)

Gosh, Jimmie, I could provide a "definition" of Asshole and little would change... :-)

Docket 98-143 filings there were only about 2,200.

>I'm not the one yelling and calling people names, Len. You are.

Poor BABY! "Yelling?" :-) I turned up the speaker volume

Jimmie, go get laid or something. You are going wayyyy too far in criticsm. There are a LOT of things "I didn't mention" that happened back then. Why do you want to hear them? You argue and complain that "I tell too much [personal] information" yet now you want to argue minutae about them?

>And the fact remains that cb quickly went downhill in the late 1960s

WRONG. "Little boxes" of 1400 to 2400 square feet on third-acre land parcels, each one worth in excess of a half million
now. The difference in elevation between the "bottom" of the hill and the "top" is about 450 feet, the "top" of the local for you, I was the speaker for our neighborhood back a decade plus ago. Good speech but it didn't matter...the issue had already been decided in favor of changing the "R" (Residential) to "R-1" (Residential with limited multi-family). One in our neighborhood affected found that out after the fact. The developer requesting the change (for "senior citizen apartments") ran out of money and couldn't start. We (us neighbors) were at the meetings with the second developer

who did the walled community (single-family houses).

Do NOT tell ME what the zoning changes are in MY neighborhood are, Jimmie. YOU are NOT INVOLVED here. If you need information, just ask, don't make up stories.

>Would you support and accept that sort of change, Len?

I accepted it, as did my neighbors. We did NOT "support" it.

The neighbor who found out about the under-the-table zoning change now works for our Councilwoman and has been at neighborhood meetings with the government as organizer.

>After all, it >would give a lot more people the opportunity to get into your >give up anything except your mental image of the neighborhood.

All of us at 840 feet MSL or lower (my back yard is 820 feet) lost ALL the view we had. New homes were two-story.

>Would you oppose or support that change?

I already described what happened, dumb bass. Inject yourself with your own hypotheses and "questions." They didn't apply to me.

>Or suppose a licensed radio amateur moved in next door and wanted to >put up a few 70 foot towers with big beams (like K8MN's). Would that be >OK with you?

Yes. The FAA would get on their case before me. You forget where your "analogies" are located. Look up BUR on a "sectional."

There's ALREADY an amateur two blocks up, WITH beams. Just not at 70 foot height. Lower.

[you WILL reply "how much lower, Len?" as if that were somehow 'important! :-) ]

>Your postings here exceed mine in number and length, Len.
>You're describing yourself, not me.

Gosh, better STOP, right? Jimmie NO LIKE my postings!

>You're really emotionally invested in rrap....

Tsk, bad "investment." Isn't earning me any "interest."

All on "account" of some dumb bass making analogues that don't apply and trying to keep amateur radio frozen in the standards and practices of the 1930s.

>In fact, your only filing on that NPRM was those reply comments,

Whoooo-eeee...you are REALLY in a snit about 1998 issues!

Sweetums, it wasn't ME who brought up (or brings up) those old, old WT Docket 98-143 comments. Tsk, tsk, my Scorecard is on Docket 05-235. 2005, not 1998.

My "score card" postings don't mention that, Jimmie.

If you can't get your analogies in order, PLEASE try to refrain from dredging up the PAST. It won't help whatever you think your case IS.

>You weren't at the VE session, don't know any of the people involved,
>and yet you accused others of fraud.

Tsk, tsk. My OPINIONS about those six-year-old licensees remain the SAME, sweetums. DEAL WITH IT. :-)

>And you claimed that because, in your opinion, 6-year-olds could not

Who is doing the "dredging up," Jimmie? :-)

>Truth is, you've repeatedly defended your position on the issue.
>You didn't "drop it".

Wow...poor baby, STILL arguing and re-arguing the PAST!

>Now you could come out and say it was a bad idea and that >there should be no age requirements for an amateur radio license.

Awwww....you want me to say "sowwy?" :-)

Jimmie, DROP this old argument. It has NO BEARING on NPRM 05-143.

>> You DO? Okay,
>> I'll try to hound you about NEVER serving your country in

Then why did you claim all that "knowledge" about being IN the military, Jimmie?

Ho. Ho. Ho. YES, you do! :-)

>I do know a few things, though, and it really seems to tick you

>dates of Soviet Bear bombers....

Jimmie, Jimmie, Jimmie, I acknowledged that I DID confuse the existance of that type of Soviet aircraft at the time involved. EXACT AIRCRAFT DETAILS of the entire Cold War wasn't a career specialty of mine in aerospace.

You want to microscope-focus on minutae in order to show a poster is "mistaken" and therefore of no value whatsoever in these non-discussions. :-)

DID the USSR have bombers capable of reaching from Kamchatka to the Kanto Plain on Honshu in Japan in the mid-1950s? Yes, they DID. Both the USA and USAF had anti-aircraft measures for such events. Did the USSR have an air-deployable nuclear weapon in that same time? Yes, it did. Was I stationed in Tokyo in that time? Yes, I was. Was I involved in contingency plans and drilling for same at that time? Yes, I was. I'll not argue the TYPE of Soviet aircraft the USSR MIGHT have used in the mid-1950s to deliver any nukes. None were dropped.

But, WHAT DOES IT MATTER on the type of Soviet aircraft involved then? YOU were NOT INVOLVED. YOU were NEVER IN THE MILITARY!

In this thread I was just posting a near-daily tally of the into minor-league Spanish Inquisition stuff with your "questions" and old, old arguments from the past on very different subjects.

Now, now, you should be PROUD of what you do. If you were really PROUD, then you wouldn't mind revealing your employer.

Now if you had something to HIDE from your employer, that would be different. Also be hypocritical.

>Perhaps it's time to repost your classic "sphincters post", where you

Perhaps you need a tranquilizer instead? You are getting all wrought
up about subjects that don't have anything to do with Docket 05-235.

Jeffie-poo is probably too busy "lecturing" at the "university" to come in here and grapple with the no-code bottom feeders... :-)

USCG has STOPPED monitoring the 500 KHz frequency, Jimmie. Really.

Why do you say that?

Tsk, tsk, tsk, you argue minutae over sentence structure? Would it be better if I wrote it in morse code?

Tsk, tsk. I'm not getting paid to write all this stuff, Jimmie.
:-)

No, I don't "gotta." My wife and I have been enjoying the pictures and programs on that TV. We have digital cable service, Jimmie, over 150 channels of a great variety of programs.

Tsk, tsk, I guess if one is "anti-code" then one can't mention (evil?) money? :-)

LCD and plasma panel HD-ready TVs might be starting to come down in price. DTV is the FUTURE, Jimmie. FCC said so.
Telegraphy is the PAST. ARRL don't want to admit that, but it IS.

>You sure seem to be one of those people who consider "net worth" and Nothing "synonymous" there, Jimmie. We planned for it, got it.

"Damages?" Tsk, tsk. Who made YOU "judge" of what is "damaged?"

Don't you have any other hobby besides radiotelegraphy? And making some of the longest "I'm only asking 'question'" posts in the history of newsgrouping... :-)

Big, brave mighty macho morsemen are NEVER "afraid," Jimmie.

Was your "courage" challenged? I don't think so. Of course, you NEVER served in the military of your country, took NO risks that might possibly hurt you. We should "respect" you more for that, right? Took LOTS of "courage" to stay OUT.

>You seem to be afraid of any test, though. Or any question.

Taken - and passed all - REAL Tests, Jimmie. No fear.

Even this long one. I've ANSWERED all your questions, haven't I?

"All you were doing was asking questions!"

All I did was answer those "questions," and simply ask a few of my own. You haven't answered all of my previous questions and I doubt you will answer any from this reply. Tsk, tsk.

Nope. You called Dave a "nobody" when I can readily find HIS name in numerous references in Amateur Radio related publications. And at least I've been quoted twice in "CQ" magazine, had several letters published in CQ and QST, and have my name in such references as "DXCC"

You think Frankie's court martials are "nothing". They FEDERAL convictions, regardless of whether he was "found guilty" or "pled guilty".

No...I won't go as far as calling Frankie's conduct treason, nor

Six documents signed by four commanding officers and two Commandants addressed to me that start off with the words 'To All Those Who Shall See These Presents Greetings'.....

Those certificates of appointment (better known in the Corps as "promotion warrants") gave me the authority to make those decisons.
That's why the Marine Corps has the widest Enlisted-to-Officer ratio of all the services.

Don't ask me to take any shred of responsibility for your actions.
Dudly's posts are a matter of public record and nobody needs my address in order to read them. And you should rethink your intention of getting him booted from his job -- although he's a nitwit and a pathological liar, he might just be a damn fine LPN.

I don't think so.

Steve has been warned away from visiting my home, and that's good enough for me at this time.

His anti-everything comments are public record. Ditto his paranoid
"liar behind every tree" fantasy. Google provides.

Being the prolific poster that he is, he's probably made hundreds if not thousands of posts from his employers computers. If they don't already know what kind of idiot they have on "thier" hands by now they never will.

I thought I was clear about this: I am no more a "witness" than anyone

new posts from Dudly for at least a few months -- that is, unless he's

BIG SNIP DUE TO WINDY PONTIFICATIONS, BUT HERE'S THE "MONEY SHOT"

Mark is on his own.

UNQUOTE

There's three "NO'S" and one rather adamant reaffrimation of a NO.

We have yet to hear from Todd.

So... 75% of Markie's support base have told him no, and told him so publically.

Let's see if Don Quixotie still wants to tilt at those windmills.

Yes, they are.

And I might add that CARD XII's suggestion of a "psychologist" for your problems was al ill-informed as your attempt to use an "allergist".

Had you taken my advice years ago and followed-up with a NEUROLOGIST you might have already been an Extra or General.

Yes, they are...And CARD XII's suggestion of a "psychologist" was as ill-informed as YOUR initial discussions about your "allergist"...(Although you COULD use one, but not for getting a "Morse Code waiver...)

Perhaps if you'd followed up with a NEUROLOGIST as I had suggested

It doesn't matter...

Your "allergist's" opinion wouldn't have held water, and "CARD
XII's" suggestions of a psychologist was equally incorrect.

Now...Had your followed up with a NEUROLOGIST as I had suggested years ago, you might have your General or Extra today.....

UNQUOTE

Two points, Markie...First of all the post you cite is about the FEDERAL GOVERNMENT ignoring it's prohibition of subjecting a citizen to double jeopardy...Not "discussion points" in a USENET forum.

Secondly, Frankie's courts martials are part-and-parcel of these discussions because >>HE<< brought them into it...Had he not made them public, I wouldn't have had a clue...

So..Where's the hipocracy? He brought it up, not me.

"Board" "Nursing"

And what the heck was "avidaad" supposed to be?

No...K1MAN got himself "disliked" because he's an idiot.

> it struck me that prehaps the same sort of response might work on

"accusing" "commiting"

What "response"...?!?!

And K1MAN's "accusations" were in the form of look-alike "subpoenas" that he mailed out, ergo violating federal law by misusing the mail service.

If the FCC were mandated to accept the simple majority of comments, either way you look at it, Morse Code testing (in the United Staes) in one form or another would be staying for some time to come.

No...You ignored the possibility that I was right. You've made several other wagering challenges yourself in the past, so feel free to dismount the "high horse" any time you're ready.

I stand corrected on your "donation to the zero land" buro, however your suggestion that I somehow defiled ANYone's corpse is assinine and disgusting...

But then, considering the source.....

Yes, they are.

So far the only accusation here is that I have "welched" on a bet, an act that could not not have occured since the wager was never accepted.

As for "wiggling out" of anything, I think you already set a several-years-long track record of having no tolerance or use for "rules" of any kind, and that would include "accepting" a publically offered wager IN public...Not trying to make an issue of it as somehow not "kept" years after you diss'ed it.

That would not be correct. There have been no waivers allowed for the basic 5wpm. The only waivers that existed were for the 13wpm & 20wpm. Or do you mean that the neurologist could have advised him on training and testing approaches to learn and pass the 5wpm?

That's not what I said.

I said I am in favor of allowing some access to HF without the Morse exam.

I also said I favor retaining the Morse exam for the Extra Class license and for limiting access to those frequencies where Morse is most used where the licensee has not demonstrated at least some proficiency in Morse Code.

That would "not be correct" under the current rules, Dee. However the re-posting from Markie was from several years ago. In that context it was originally made, it was...

No, I meant that he could have gotten past all of that over 5 years ago had he done what was suggested. Markie was correct in his statement that someone reposted one of his old posts.

I'm still confused. You seem to be saying that he could have gotten a waiver for the 5wpm if he had done it years ago. That is not true. There has never been a waiver for the lowest speed. He still would have had to pass the 5wpm level to get any waiver.

When women can do plumbing and remodeling that is a sign that they may be shemales. It isn't definite but watch them carefully for signs.
If you go back to peeping, look for something like this when you look in the bathroom window. It is a photo of a Glendale woman I dated last year.

I would disagree with this approach. Here's why.

Let me start by saying that I believe all amateurs should have a basic ability in Morse code as it is one of the basics of amateur radio. There are two ways to get people to learn it. One, which is what we have now, is to tie the most desired privilege (HF voice) to the subject that they least desire to study. However there is a second way. Allow the novices and techs CW privileges only on the General HF bands without any further testing. They can have HF voice, digital, etc at any time they then pass the whatever the test will be in the future for General. This gives them a taste of HF. I would happily work them as slow as they want to go in order to encourage the use of CW.

I have seen that person's results and how those results were obtained.
They're more accurate than your results.

I don't apply the title "expert" to myself or the person who compiled the scorecard.
Nor do I apply the title "expert" to you, Len.

> What's to "analyze?" It's called READING, Jimmie. Even Obviously you're not too good at it, Len ;-)

That's not the whole story, Len.

Not at all, Len. If there's any "fudging" going on, it's yours.

It's interesting to note that you accuse others of "fudging" without even knowing who they are or what methods they used...but you are incapable of any error....

Also interesting how you claim to know others' motivations but won't reveal
your own.

Now about those "indeterminates"....

If a person makes multiple filings that are not identical, you count them
as separate comments, not duplicates, right? Someone who files both comments and reply comments gets multiple 'votes' in your count even though they are only one person repeating themselves...right?

In your 'scorecard' you alternate the terms 'comments' and 'filings', but in fact you count comments, reply comments, the NPRM itself, and almost anything else as if it were a 'comment'...right?
>
> By the way, I don't know if the FCC uses "percentages" or not.
> I used them to get a clearer picture of the total of opinions.

And even your flawed methods show that the majority do NOT support the NPRM. The majority do NOT want all Morse Code testing to end.

> You dislike that.

Oh no, not at all. The percentages tell the story very well.

> Obviously, since the comment period start > showed that MORE were in favor of the NPRM than against.

There you go, claiming to know others' motivations but not revealing your own.

Not at all. I know where it is. So do several other rrappers.

Can't you find it, Len?

Besides, what good would it do to tell you where it is? You'd simply attack the person who did the compilation, make fun of them, behave according to your classic profile.

> >Easier to access than ECFS. You've claimed years and years of

Yes. I found it in a matter of seconds. But a search engine isn't necessary.

> You must. Or you are so damn petulant about this > that you have to sit in here and heckle, heckle, heckle
> about minutae just to satisfy your own wounded whatever...

Not me, Len. You're the one who acts that way.

The majority want at least code testing for Extra. That's the fact -
like it or not...

Now here's the big issue, and proof of your inaccuracy:

You claim to have read and understood ALL the filings on 05-235.
You've made a big deal about that, repeated it over and over like a mantra, and demanded that others do the same before they dare to even ask you a question.

But if you'd actually read all those filings, you'd know where to find
the information I refer to. The information that shows 55% of commenters who address the Morse Code test issue want at least some Morse Code testing retained. And the information that only 45% of commenters who address the Morse Code test issue want complete elimination of the Morse Code test.

Since you can't find that website, it's clear you didn't read all the filings
on WT 05-235, or at least didn't understand them.

And that's a fact. Like it or not......

IF the FCC were so mandated, but we all know they are not bound by any "voting" analogy. What also is obvious to those that have been around long enough is that the current "score" is a dramatic shift from opinions within the amateur community as compared to prior efforts to "score" support (98-143) or back when the first efforts to bring a nocode license began.

Playing your number realignment, you must admit
then that 68% of commentors DO support ending code for General. THAT is dramatic in comparison to past opinion analysis.

Consider too that
IF the FCC retained any level of code testing for Extra then the FCC would/will have to reintroduce waivers as the international treaty no longer provides absolute minimal code requirements for any level.
That's a path that FCC just won't go down.

Cheers,
Bill K2UNK

307. Question on AutoPatch

When using an autopatch you are basically allowing someone who is unlicensed onto the repeater. What responsiblity does the user of the radio serve? And is there anything keeping an autopatch from allowing someone to call INTO it and reach someone on amateur radio (aside from configuration at the repeater site?).

Now, what if someone unlicesed uses an autopatch to call a licensed ham who IDs?

I'm just curious here as I'm new to the hobby.

For that matter.. what happens if someone puts me on hold and music starts spewing out of the repeater?

And in agreement with what you wrote, IF the FCC had meant this to be a popularity contest, then it would have been called a VOTE.

IF the FCC had meant to gather information and rationale regarding the requirement for or against Morse Code testing then it would have been called a COMMENT.

Care to look and see what the FCC called it?

Really? I didn't know that.

Did you know that Hiram Percy Maxim's uncle invented the Maxim machine gun? Hiram Percy invented the automobile muffler and a gun silencer among other things.

I knew of no MARS thing. I've stated here that I spent time operating a MARS station in my off duty time.

Tsk. If you'd like to find out more about USAF MARS operation in Vietnam, feel free to search a few web sites, do a cut and paste job and post a lengthy treatise on the subject as if it were your own work.
That'd be typical of your remarks in here. :-(

You keep confusing yourself with those paid to regulate amateur radio and with those who participate in amateur radio. You're neither.

You surely are. I saw all six of your submissions to the FCC on 05-235.

something in which you have no stake?

You just told us that the firm has a nice web site if any cared to look at it? Was your comment insincere? At you suggestion, I went and looked at it. I gave you my opinion. The site isn't slick or glitzy and it doesn't offer secure ordering. All in all, it looks rather homemade.

comments?

You're right. I don't live in California and don't have any business in Right. It's sort of like the details of my service in Vietnam. Just because you haven't seen it, doesn't mean that it doesn't exist.

That's real rib-tickling stuff, Len. If the engineering stuff starts to peter out, you might consider a career as a retired (from regular hours) standup comic. That surface mount stuff should slay an audience.

Really? Let me write all this stuff down for future reference. Does that mean I could enclose an antenna in fibreglas or PVC? Could I mount such an antenna in an attic? What'll they think of next?

you have said others should bother to understand before they post \

Wake up, Blockhead.

We were talking about your alleged inability to "hear" Morse Code....It had NOTHING to due with your alleged dyslexia.

Hmmmmmmmmm....What to do with my free time...Travel, maybe...?!?!

> but you were > fairer than normal so maybe I'll give you a break and not forward this

It wasn't "medical advice"..."Medical advice" is preparing and implementing a care plan with PRESCRIBED diagnostics, thereapies, treatment or medicines. Even suggesting a dose of Tylenol can, under certain review, be considered "medical advice" although Tylenol is an OTC medication.

I suggested you see a neurologist. You chose not to do so.
That's a very clearly authorized NURSING function.

No, there's not anything 'illegal or dishonorable' in NOT accepting something...As a matter of fact, sometimes it takes more courage to say
"no thanks" than it does to say "yes" or "OK".

Howvever, THAT having been said, it >>IS<< "dishonorable" to come back AFTER THE FACT and allege that something was "welched upon" when it wasn't accepted in the first place.

Had Brain said "You're on", I would have shipped him his money.

The licensed Ham - the control operator must immediately shut down the patch and give their Amateur radio call sign

The "Borad" at the very least. I bet Michigan has anti-stalking laws.
The ones Marky is in violation of by his own admission. The repercussions won't be "pleasennt" for him, either.

"Polls?" "Support?" About the ONLY thing available there is ARRL writings, hardly an unbiased source of "poll" information. Let's go through some history -

I started this "score card" posting at the beginning of August as part of my own desire to get some "visibility" into opinions as filed with the FCC. It isn't "official" except the tallying has been done in an honest manner with the best accuracy...such accuracy continuously verified with the ECFS search engine totals for specified dates.

As of 1 PM EDT on 3 November 2005, there been 3,687 filings in WT Docket 05-235 between the 2005 dates of 15 July to and including 31 October. I've read ALL of those filings. I have copies of ALL of those filings. Each and every filing is available to anyone who has Internet access to the FCC.

In 1990 there was NO Internet for the public (it went public in 1991). The Comments and Replies on 90-53 were only visible by either subscribing to a copy service of the FCC or going to their DC reading room in person. Just the same, the final Report and Order DID create the no-code-test Technician class license in 1991 and the numbers in that class have not ceased growing in 14 years. Did the ARRL have some kind of "poll" on those back then? I don't recall any from them or from any other source. The MOVEMENT towards no-code-test had begun years before.

In 1998 there was Internet access to the public and the FCC had gone on-line with the beginning of their ECFS. They had not fully organized clerical tasks and an examination of WT Docket 98-143 will show several Petitions mixed in with those for the "Restructuring" NPRM. That Docket was extended more than once, finally getting an official end on 15 Jan 99. The only "poll" on those filings was done by Leroy (Larry) Klose II. A masterful and complex task involving several different subjects of the NPRM, it is still in the ECFS as submitted, can be found by looking just past 15 January 1999. The total comment time was about 11 months...from the first appearance date of first 98-143 comments to the official close of comments on 15 Jan 99. The number of filings in that 11-month period were only about 2200. Did the ARRL supply any "official poll" on 98-143? I don't recall any or even if they mentioned Larry Klose' fine tabulation. Roughly 400 filings have been submitted in the YEARS after the close of comments on 98-143, most past the final R&O 99-412 which essentially voided any need for "more comments." Anyone with Internet access can see all of those filings.

WT Docket 05-235 (about NPRM 05-143) has had 3,687 filings in about 15 weeks, an average of over 240 per week. Has there been any "official poll" from the ARRL about 05-235? I haven't seen any. I haven't seen any from anyone else which is one reason for my creation of this "score card."

Supposedly there IS another "poll" or "score card" done elsewhere. A URL or other website information source has not been revealed publicly in here. Those who are interested in someone else's "score card" can go there... or they can go in and READ ALL of them.

The only "polling" information I've seen on the code test issue has been in the editorials of ARRL publications, hardly an unbiased source about morse code use. The ARRL has conditioned the thinking of generations of amateurs into the belief that morse code skill was the very epitome of amateur radio. On the other hand, the ARRL membership has NEVER been greater than a quarter of all licensed U.S. radio amateurs; as of July this year their publicly-stated membership was only 20 percent. The ARRL claims to "represent all amateurs" yet they will only allow MEMBERS to vote on anything. They represent NONE of those desiring to GET INTO amateur radio. The ARRL is simply PRO-code-test and their ONLY Comment on 05-235 so far (filed 31 October, last official day) is largely a STALLING tactic to attempt HOLDING any final R&O until the far future...i.e., they IMPEDE progress.

I am ceasing public posting of any "score card" on WT Docket 05-235. The official end of the Comment period was reached on 31 October...but the official end of the Replies to Comments period isn't until 14 November. I will forward private e-mail tallies to those I select. You are getting one, Bill.

I have received too many false charges of "inaccuracy" and general "dishonesty" about my "score card" to make it useless continuing this tally in public. NONE of those crybaby finger-pointers have provided any "improvements" to tallying opinions nor of providing "greater accuracy." They have NOT proved a single charge of "inaccuracy" nor of "dishonesty." They DO continue to obscure this important issue in U.S. amateur radio regulations with long, long, long postings alleged to be "just questions" or "clarifications." They are neither. They are HECKLING. Malicious heckling probably done in hopes that I will not have any time left but to post replies to their "just questions."

Not to worry on time. I can MAKE time for continuing observation of NPRM 05-143 progress. I stand my ground on what I've posted in public so far. Those who charge "dishonesty" or "inaccuracy" had damn well PROVE their point with EXACT locations. Negative criticsm does nothing but further the "Animal House" behavior that has polluted this venue called a news-group for the last year.

Robeson is still nuts, but maybe "progressively" nuts.

Jimmie is a whining little crybaby who loves to engage in word "food fights" about minutae. In any other venue this would be HECKLING.

Both are growing ALIKE in behavior. Scary thought, ey?

Jimmie thinks he knows ALL about long-time-ago radio. Thing is, he did NOT work in radio a half century ago. I did. But, Jimmie has READ a LOT about long-time-ago radio and must think he "knows" about it...just like he "knows" all about military life and how it feels to be geographically close to unfriendlies during the Cold War.

There have now been 3,687 filings on WT Docket 05-235 at the FCC.
That is, very roughly, only 1% of all U.S. licensees including or excluding those in their grace period. Statistically, that small number would be rather marginal for any REAL determination of either minority or majority.

However, from the TEXT of those who are against the NPRM, it is rather obvious that the MAJORITY of THOSE are still stuck in the morse myths and standards-practices in amateur radio of the 1930s. Some of those believe they are engaging in some kind of "service to their nation" by their ham radio hobby.

[the FCC uses the word "service" as a regulatory term, denoting a type and kind of radio being regulated...such as Citizens

Band Radio SERVICE]

>> You haven't got your first amateur radio license, Len.
>
>That would make Len "unbiased."

Irrelevant to Jimmie. Jimmie NEVER operated any HF transmitter in the 1950s. Jimmie NEVER got any FCC license in that time. I did both. [First 'Phone in 1956 at an FCC Field Office in Chicago, one sitting,
no retries and passed]

Us readers do NOT know for sure whether or not Jimmie EVER worked in ANY radio service OTHER than amateur radio. He won't say in public. Jimmie hasn't admitted that all radio works by the SAME laws of physics. Since that is established fact, the distinction between 'amateur' and any other kind or type of radio is solely an adminstrative differentiation by a radio regulating agency. Jimmie wants to make amateur radio technology/operation somehow SPAY-SHUL and "more advanced" than any commercial or military radio. The Church Lady is in fine form...

Probably from that "Secret Source" of his that he will NOT name.

Robeson still hasn't produced his "secret source" on the ex-NADC person who supposedly did a "performance review" of my assignment there for RCA Corporation in 1971. [NO such "review" was ever done on contractor-visitor personnel]

Jimmie KNOWS things mo' bettah than anyone. Sigh.

He will NOT. All must "show their work" to HIM if HE requests it.

Jimmie's numbers are "accurate" by definition...of Jimmie.
None may question that. [if they do, he goes into long, long, long, lonnnnng posts 'challenging' minutae in everything the challenger has said]

>> It's interesting that you will go on and on and on

>Lots of people deciding the outcome of the NPRM are not involved "in"
>amateur radio.

Irrelevant to Jimmie or any other PCTA in here. They haven't looked at the FCC budget figures showing how many work there.

Jimmie is still stuck in "fraternal" concepts of rule. He apparently doesn't understand that a single federal agency regulates ALL of U.S. civil radio (i.e., non-government, non-military). The Laws of Congress (Communications Act of 1934, Telecommunications Act of 1996) have NOT required
ANYONE in the FCC to hold amateur radio license grants.

Jimmie and the Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society (ARS) think they are a "law" unto themselves. Bless the ARRL for continuing reinforcement of that conditioned thinking.
Want to GET INTO amateur radio? Follow the 'rule' of the Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society and test for beeping.
No beep, no get into HF ham bands. Gosh, and they did NOT tell the Army about that a half century ago!

The fraternal order doesn't want non-beepers dirtying up their private sandbox. Their sand is elite. But their sand is also sometimes used for kitty litter.

Beep, beep

My address is available via the FCC licensing database as you well know. You know because you have posted snippets of it in an attempt to intimidate me.

You see, Len has had a lifelong interest in radio. But in rrap, if you've had a lifelong interest in radio and don't have a ham license, it gets these guys all upset.

No license required to have an opinion wrt amateur radio. No license required to enforce amateur radio rules. No license required to restructure the ARS. No license required to drop the morse code exam.

And that's the way it is.

Why is it that you only want volunteers to take up the burden of learning morse code on "thier" free time and equip morse code radio stations at their own expense?

Why wouldn't you want paid, professional radio operators and radio users to know Morse Code? Especially paid emergency communicators and emergency responders.

If the government needed or wanted morse code radio operators, they should create a GS5-7-9-11 series and get them.

But the PCTA are more than willing to donate other people's free time and money in order to provide the government with something it doesn't want and doesn't want to pay for, just so you'll have someone to QSL with on the low end of the bands.

Thanks a lot

I'll have to look up that new guy who came on here several years ago singing the praises of the Morse Code that he was -going- to learn. He was the darling of the group, all PCTA fawning all over him. I looked

That is only your opinion. At one time morse was truly one of the You've said over and over that removing the Morse Code test would have

no
effect on existing licensees. Now you say you can't guarantee there would be no effect..

> >That's right. FCC made a big mistake doing that - one they're still > >trying to deal with.
> Why was that a "mistake?"

Because 27 MHz was/is not a good choice for short-range land-mobile radio communications like cb.

Because the FCC did not have the resources to enforce its own rules, and the cb folks did not have the discipline to adhere to those rules.

> Amateurs weren't using their former 11 meter band enough.

How do you know? You weren't a radio amateur then and you aren't one now.

My reading of the history says that hams got 11 meters just after WW2 as a sort of compensation for the near-total loss of 160 (a very popular band before WW2) to LORAN. By 1958, hams had 15 meters and more access to 160. So FCC reassigned 11 meters.

The fact that FCC could reassign 11 meters without a treaty change was a big part of the decision, too.

> The FCC is NOT "dealing with" CB now.

Sure they are. Where do you think freebanders come from?
Or the illegal makers and sellers of 11 meter amplifiers? Or the intruders into the 10 and 12 meter ham bands?

> Why do you care?

Because I don't want what happened to cb to happen to amateur radio. It seems to me that you would like for amateur radio to become just like cb.

> YOU were NOT INVOLVED with radio of any kind

Yes, I was.

In 1958 I was four years old. I was aware of lots of things at that age. A lot more than you'd give a four-year-old credit for.

Not exactly. But my enjoyment of amateur radio would be affected, or even destroyed. Which means I, an existing amateur, would be affected.

I think you want amateur radio to become more and more like cb.

Not a cliche. The truth. You have chosen not to avail yourself of that opportunity.

No, you weren't. You were allowed to make certain adjustments to transmitters bought and paid for by others, as part of a large team (a whole battalion!) of people.

But you as an individual weren't "on HF" then.

There was a time when a First Class 'Phone or even a Second Class was a near-guarantee of a decent job in "radio". That time is gone. I knew it was on the way out even in the 1970s - that's why I went for degrees in Electrical Engineering.

> >> There will be NO effect on operating privileges of already-

So your claim is meaningless.

> Will existing Amateur Extras lose their license and/or > privileges? I doubt it. Same with Generals.

Your doubt isn't a guarantee.

> Technicians
> WILL have a chance to enjoy more of their hobby with > increased frequency privileges.

No, they won't! You are mistaken, Len.

Obviously you haven't read the entire NPRM - or maybe you don't understand it. Typical.

If FCC enacts the NPRM as written, no class of license will gain any operating privileges. Technicians will still be VHF/UHF only, unless they have passed a Morse Code test. No HF for Techs who haven't passed a Morse Code test under the NPRM.

The NPRM specifically denies giving any existing licensees any more privileges. They specifically point out, again and again, that if the Morse Code test is removed, existing Technicians need only pass the General written exam to get lots of HF privileges.

Those Techs who have passed a Morse Code test will retain their HF privileges - consisting of Morse Code on parts of 80, 40, 15 and 10 meters, plus SSB voice on part of 10 meters.

If Element 1 is removed, the only way for a non-code-tested
Tech to get any HF/MF privileges is for that non-code-tested Tech to pass the General written.

FCC also repeatedly points out their commitment to an incentive licensing system of three license class levels.

That's the way the NPRM is written.

> Why are you so against that?

I'm against any reductions in Morse Code or written testing. I think Morse Code testing is a good thing for the Amateur Radio Service.

In fact, I think the dropping of the Morse Code test for Technician, back in 1991, was a big mistake.

Just my opinion.

> Why do you want to hold Techs in their present

2400 sf isn't a big house, Len. They're little boxes on the hillside, all right.

And a half-million is a pretty lowpriced house in suburban LA, isn't it?

Do you think the owner of a half-million-dollar house is better than the owner of a quarter-million-dollar house?

Actually it looks like I'm dead-on accurate except for the boxes being on the hillside rather than at the bottom.

I was being hypothetical, Len. You seem to have trouble dealing in abstractions.

You opposed it, then, and only accepted it because you LOST

"ALL" the view? You can't see the sky?

Was it 'the end of the world as you knew it'?

Why were you so against that change? Ah, you ENJOYED being "elite" and looking down (literally!) on your neighbors! ;-)

> >Would you oppose or support that change?

> I already described what happened, dumb bass. Inject yourself > with your own hypotheses and "questions." They didn't apply to

They applied almost exactly.

Let's recap....

More than 40 years ago, you bought the house on Lanark Street.
Classic little ticky-tacky box on the hillside, lots of nice things about the house and the area. Zoning (which is The Government) protected you from certain changes.

Then someone wanted to change the zoning, because their vision of the area and its future were different from your own. You opposed the change even though it would have no direct effect on your house. But The Government prevailed, the zoning changed, and the new two story houses were built. And the value of your property continued to rise.

Was it The Government's role to always keep things As They Were
When You Bought Your House? To guarantee your "view" regardless of the wishes and needs of those "downhill" fro you?

Seems like you thought it was.

> >Or suppose a licensed radio amateur moved in next door and wanted to

Ah - you expect a different branch of The Government to protect you from that.

> the standards and practices of the 1930s.

You wanted to keep your neighborhood frozen in the standards and practices of the 1960s, Len.

The analogy is near-perfect. You reacted exactly as predicted.
You opposed a change that would only affect you mentally and/or emotionally, and expected The Government to place your desires above those of the other property owners.

At least in the case of the zoning, you were in the affected community. In the case of amateur radio, you're the outsider trying to get those who are in the community to accept the changes you want, and The Government to make you happy........

One other analysis that I've seen is by a Northern Mariana Islands callsign http://ah0a.org/FCC/05-235/ --- it may be the site that N2EY refers to.

If it is, N2EY's blustering is a puzzlement because the results at that site are strikingly similar to your tabulation, with 45% fully in favor of the NRPM (drop the test) and 55% in favor of keeping some level of CW testing.

He classifies the valid responses on the same basis as you ("For NRPM", "Keep the current test", and "Extra Only"). Then he has three categories of "Others" which aren't included in his tally (Dupes and other junk).

"Strikingly similar"?

Len Anderson claims the tally is 49.33% for and 50.67% against the NPRM (either partly or completely). AH0A claims 45% for and 55% against.
That's a pretty big difference, particularly when Len posts his results to four significant figures and claims to be "accurate".

Whose count is correct?

Len claims to have read and understood all the "filings" - yet he could not find the AH0A count, which is clearly mentioned in AH0A's filing.

So - did Len really read and understand ALL the filings?

Yet the results are different - by a considerable percentage.

Why?

More likely he's got them tied up in the basement and uses their house and savings for whatever ungodly purposes he can dream up...

Maybe to finance that Liquid Oxygen-cooled storage capacitor idea of his...

I wonder if mumsie and popsie knows he got booted from the only local ISP in Taylorville for acting like an idiot on the Internet?

I wonder if they know he had their pictures on his webpage which was linked to other webpages of his that were rife with profanities, insults and assinine behaviour...?!?!

I wonder if he's still flying that illegal ultralight? He'll probably "park" it in some neighbor's tree someday, becoming the laughing stock of South Central Illinois and getting his name brought to the attention of the local FSDO.

K1MAN EDITORIAL - ED050616 -

WHERE IS THE OTHER SIDE OF THE STORY?

You read what the FCC says about K1MAN. You read about what other hams say about K1MAN. Where do you read about what K1MAN says?
ARRL? No! QST? No! CQ? No! World Radio! No! K1TP? No!
QRZ? No! What is wrong with this picture, you ignorant hypocrites?

I'd say "nothing". What obligation do those other entities have to promulgate your BS and sad story?

You got yourself into this corner all by yourself.

The ignorant one is the idiot facing his third NAL just before his license is due to be renewed!

No wonder the Arabs hate our guts so much.

For whatever reason persons of Arabic nationalities may dislike the United States, I'm willing to be that NONE of them have ANYthing to do with Amateur Radio.

No wonder Amateur Radio is going down the tubes, led by ARRL.

It's not going down ANY tubes led by the ARRL.

It's going "down the tubes" coutesy of lawbreaking, hate-mongering, selfish punks like you, N9OGL, AB8MQ, etc etc etc...

I love both America and Amateur Radio, however.

No you don't.

If you did, you wouldn't break the laws of the first and practicies of the second, then try to rub everyone's nose in it.

> K1MAN will be on for many many years to come...(SNIP)

I forecast no longer than your next renewl date plus the period of time your application will be under review/prosecution.

>...(UNSNIP) and the true scum of our precious hobby and service will be thoroughly exposed in the upcoming court proceedings.

"We" already know where the scum is. He's a selfish, self-centered egotistical idiot living in Maine, with an ugly step-cousin in Illinois.

K1MAN has been on the air with IARN information bulletins since 1987, and the FCC is as powerless to stop them as K1MAN is powerless to stamp out amateur radio ignorance.

Like I said....Your next renewal plus the period of time your case is being litigated...Then...QRT.

Fear not fellow Radio Amateurs. You have the constitutional right to be stupid!

That's really the way to generate sympathy and support for your cause.

Only in America!

Only in America would a law-breaker like you be tolerated for so long. Your "day" is past due. It's time to get the garbage off the front step.

Join the American Amateur Radio Association today!

Why? It's not going to be around much longer either.

See www.K1MAN.com

Finally ponied-up the bucks for another Yahoo domain, I see.

K1MAN SAYS:

FCC ISSUES A $21, 000 NOTICE OF APPARENT LIABILITY AGAINST K1MAN

In a "NAL" released 7 June 2005, the FCC has opened a pandora's box, according to Glenn Baxter...(SNIP)

What a self-glorifying putz.

Bet he's got family in Southern California.

Manager of IARN, the International Amateur Radio Network, and AARA, the American Amateur Radio Association. Mr. Baxter was recognized by the State of Maine legislature on March 13, 1991 and named as a Vermont Academy Distinguished Alumnus on October 1, 1993 for international amateur radio communications work with his IARN.

Jim Jones and Ted Bundy won civic service awards too.

Mr. Baxter says that this whole charade is being driven by petty ham jealousy and the blatent incompetence of ARRL in failing over the years to come even close to the work of IARN in emergency communications work.

BBBBBBBBBBBBBBBWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA
HAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA
! ! ! ! ! !

Yeah...that's why the fed's are pouring hundreds-of-thousands of bucks into ARRL-sponsored and operated Emergency Communications programs!

Baxter welcomes these court actions since he has been trying to "face off" with the Commission for over 15 years. "Many heads are finally going to roll," acording to Baxter.

Nope.

Just one.

K1MAN's response is printed below together with the full text of the NAL.

In the matter of Glenn A. Baxter, P.E.
Registered Professional Engineer

.....and UNregistered Court Jester...

Licensee of Amateur Radio Station K1MAN

File. No. EB-04-BS-111
NAL/Acct. No. 200532260001
FRN 0013164975

Reply dated 12 June 2005

Respondent Glenn A. Baxter, K1MAN, denies any apparent liability for forfeiture in the amount of $21,000 or any other violations of FCC rules, state law, or federal law...(SNIP TO...)

Respondent hereby requests the Commission to supply all documentation regarding the alleged apparent liability and criminal violations for respondent to use in preparation for the again demanded trial like hearing before the full Commission and for the other court actions.

It's apparent that Glennda is going to be representing hisself.
Had a real attorney been requeting this information, there wouldn't have been any grandstanding or "opening remarks" in his request.

Respondent will be calling witnesses, introducing affivavits, and further demonstrating many ACTUAL criminal violations of Sections 333 and 501 of the 1934 Communications Act by numerous persons complained about by your respondent and others in Felony Complaint Affidavits filed with the U.S. Attorney including the two FCC officials mentioned above.

Oh no! Glennda is going to waive his "felony complaint affidavits" in front of a REAL judge ! !

BBBBBBBBBBBBBBBBWWWWWWWWWWWWWWHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA
! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! !

Maybe this is where Glennda leads the court to believe he's off his rocker in an attempt to avoid prosecution of the complaints!

Whatta schmuck!

Not THAT idiot...the ORIGINAL!

Failing to "back up an opinion", Markie, means that either the author was wrong, didn't have the facts, shot their mouth off just to be heard or doesn't have the faith of conviction in his/her own beliefs to stand behind it.

MY OPINION is that you need to move back to Illinois and marry Todd Daugherty, N9OGL. Maybe Lennie would move back (he's originally from IL) and officiate for you? You two are cut from the same cloth...Hmmmmmmmm...maybe a bit TOO close...Forget what I said...He's probably in your bloodline and that would be incest.

On the otherhand...you might LIKE that kind of thing....Lord knows...you've certainly expressed more bizarre interests than incest before.

Well, Todd...You've only posted one item on RRAP since May and already it's begun.

However, here's the benefit of the doubt: Here's a copy of the e-mail I got along with headers. I am e-mailing it to you also.

Now you can take it to your ISP and let THEM deal with it.

I didn't "snitch toad out" for his newsgroup activities other than his threats and profanities which I received via e-mail. Not all of the stupid letters I received were via his blog. The headers tell the tale and THAT'S what got him into trouble.

As for the suggestion that Todd was not responsible for the threatening letters, I look at it this way...Even if he didn't send some of them, he encouraged and incited others via his blog to act irresponsibly.

I asked him repeatedly to stop using my name and callsign on his blog, and he just repsonded with more threats and profanities.

Also, I am obviously NOT the only person who's been busting Todd's chops with his ISP.

He played with fire...He got burnt...Oh well...

QUOTE:

First off steve, those letters WERE going through my blog and some one was posting my email on it. the headers even state it. As I stated before those were fake.

UNQUOTE

And like >>I<< told >>YOU<< those "letters" were allowed to happen because YOU wouldn't exercise some control over your blog. "Freedom of speech", you kept harping.

Whelp, Todd, there are RESPONSIBILITIES that come with our freedoms, and making sure that others don't take advantage of them is one of them.

QUOTE

I don't control the people who vist my site, and my view is that ehat
you did was wrong, if you didn't like what I said on here then you should of complained to googles, because as you know that's who I am using.

UNQUOTE

Oh, but I >>DID<< talk to Google, Todd...THEIR response was that it was YOUR resposibility as "site owner" to do smething about it...Just like I told you it was.

QUOTE

what you and your little buddies on here did was restrict my free speech.

UNQUOTE

No...what I did was exercise MY rights to file a complaint.

EVERY TIME you posted a new post calling me a MF or AH or other such profane adjective, I had the legal RIGHT to file a complaint, and that's exactly what I did.

You got to have your "say", and it was all obscene and offensive. I had MY say and it was "I'm not going to take this".

What happened "happened" because I was right and had "my ducks in a row".

QUOTE

Everyone has the right to free speech, but you don't have the right to be heard, right?

UNQUOTE

You have every right to be heard...You do NOT have the right to publically insult, demean or otherwise overtly offend people after they tell you that they are offended by your behaviour.

QUOTE

however the federal courts had ruled in the past that it's only is true provided that it doesn't completely restrict the person conducting the speech. There were three alteratives that you could of done, the first simply don't look at my post.

UNQUOTE

Not looking at your post in a public forum is like trying to avoid the smell of a dead skunk, Todd...It's right there in front of you.

QUOTE

Second is complain to googles because like I said you know that is the service I am using.

UNQUOTE

Did it. They said you were responsibile.

QUOTE

and finally complain to the ISP. only after the two has been used up should you and your friends done the complaining on the Internet.

UNQUOTE

Did that too. I told you I would. You persisted in your behaviour. Your ISP even told you to stop but you persisted. You were told "six ways to Sunday" that something would happen but you ignored me.

Bad idea.

QUOTE

My blog is my thought hence, the address n9oglvoice. if you don't like what I have to say there quit coming since I was kicked off you and commander cornhole has visited my site repeatly.

UNQUOTE

Your last post was May 27th, Todd...I didn't post anything there until your comments day before yesterday.

QUOTE

As you've stated this is an open forum, and you are not the moderator nor due you own this newsgroup. AS for the email's, emails can be faked, of course a newbie like yourself wouldn't understand it.

UNQUOTE

Sure they can be faked. And they were being "faked" via YOUR site. I asked you to control it, you said no. The results were "predictable".

And I'm not a "newbie", Todd...That's why I was able to push the right buttons and get the desired results.

QUOTE

the first thing that tip me off they were fake was the fact that in the IP there was a question mark, and secondly although it is a "consolidated communication telephone" IP address it was not mine, but, again someone who has no real skill in figuring that out would believe it to be real.

UNQUOTE

Then here's the step YOU should have taken since you seem to be in a mood to tell folks the steps to take:

(1) You should have IMMEDIATELY gone to your blog and compared IP's and canned the author.

(2) You should have IMMEDIATELY called YOUR ISP and notified them

(3) You should have IMMEDIATELY posted, both on your blog and RRAP, those IP's along with yours to show the true origins of the letters.

Instead you let it happen...To me, letting something deceitful happen when you have the means to stop it is as if YOU were the originator.

QUOTE:

> I asked him repeatedly to stop using my name and callsign on his > blog, and he just repsonded with more threats and profanities.

I have NEVER used you callsign on my blog, anyone can sign in as whatever they want. Nor have I threaten you, as for profanities on here or on my blog like I said above you could of simply ignored it....if you want clean talk I know some religious sites that would love to have you.....

UNQUOTE

First of all, you've already removed a bunch of posts when you re-worked your site. Yes, You did use my callsign...Repeatedly.

And secondly, one does not have to use profantities in every third word to effectlively express themselves.

See what all the profanity got YOU?

I didn't use a bit of it.

So how do you explain THAT...?!?!

QUOTE

you see your forgetting this is the internet, I know sites where they say things ten times worse then what I've said.....if you want a clean communication go back to radio....radio and the internet as I've stated before are two different forms of communication and different sets of rules.

UNQUOTE

Well, Todd...I don't go to those "other sites" for those very reasons...I don't care to be associated with people like that.

Secondly, had YOU not introduced all of that foulness to RRAP, I wouldn't have been complaining about THAT...I wouldn't have known about this "blog" had YOU not brought it to the attention of RRAP, either.

QUOTE:

> Also, I am obviously NOT the only person who's been busting Todd's > chops with his ISP.

and it will be funny when they have to answer to the FCC since they are not only an internet service provider but they are also the phone company who controls the broadband in this town.

UNQUOTE

BBWWWHHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAH
! ! ! !

Todd, I spent an hour on the phone with an aide in the office of a certain Midwestern Congressional representitive, and it was enlightening.

I gave them YOUR blog, your e-mail address, and the links to RRAP.

They're on to you!

QUOTE

> He played with fire...He got burnt...Oh well...

there is an old saying steve, what goes around comes around.....your day will come.

UNQUOTE

Yes, it will, Todd, just as will your's...but mine won't come at the hands of a foulmouthed impotent toad who thinks adulthood is about screaming profanities and threatening "I'LL SUE! I'LL SUE!" at every opporutnity.

QUOTE

Actually, you are a "free speech abuser". Judging by the number of times you used the "F" word in the previous exchange, I'd say you're angry becasue you're NOT "F"ing as often as you'd like.

Judging by th pic on QRZ, I'd have to say I know why.

Unless he it jamming you with a carrier, he's not suppressed
anything.

Infact, he's used the very same medium and "rights" as you to express HIS opinions. YOU are the one suggesting some kind of "suppression".

I don't know either of those fellows.

And you can just go ahead and admit that the only #### you've "invented" went the way of the porcelain throne, Todd. You've not said

I DO believe you to be a liar. And until some sort of documentary

If it's a "show" you're broadcasting on 20 meters, you're violating the law.

It really is THAT simple.

That's scary! An idiot like him allowed to operate an aircraft, even if it is just an ultralight. And I know 14 year olds who hang glide and fly ultralights. Guess Toddie needed some adult supervision?

I wonder which one Toddie was...????

Exactly! FCC need only consider the comments, not act on them.

I disagree, Bill. Or rather, I'd say it's not that clear.

Back in 1998, NCI supported the concept of "5 wpm
now, complete elimination when the treaty changes".
That position got about 45% support (check Carl's post of around that time when he reported KC8EPO's tally of comments).

Now the NPRM proposes "complete elimination now that the treaty has changed" but the support is still about 45% of commenters.

So the support for total code test elimination isn't much different than it was 7 years ago.

> Playing your number realignment, you must admit
> then that 68% of commentors DO support ending

Yep. Exactly as proposed by ARRL.

>THAT is dramatic in comparison
> to past opinion analysis.

We don't really know that, do we?
There was never a serious proposal before that suggested "code test for Extra only" that I know of.

> Consider too that
> IF the FCC retained any level of code testing for > Extra then the FCC would/will have to reintroduce

Why would FCC "have to" do waivers? IIRC there's no mention of waivers in the NPRM. The treaty's been changed for almost 2-1/2 years but no waivers.

> That's a path that FCC just won't go down.
>
Probably not.

One simple solution is the "Canadian compromise": Keep code testing but change how it is scored. One method is to change the requirement for Element 3 (General written)
to the following:

Element 3 can be passed by getting an ~85% grade on the 35 written questions or a ~75% grade and a passing mark on the code test.

That way there's no "lowering of standards" yet the Morse Code test is not a mandatory pass-fail standalone test any more.

which reminds me - time to update The Pool...

Here's an update on the "when will FCC drop Element 1?" pool.
This means the effective date of the FCC action that completely eliminates Morse Code testing for any class of amateur radio license in the USA.

Note how almost everyone's date, including mine, has already passed:

WA2SI: September 13, 2003 (first prediction)
KF6TPT: September 29, 2003
KC8EPO: December 31, 2003
K2UNK: January 1, 2004 (first prediction)
K2ASP: March 15, 2004
AA2QA: April 1, 2004
N2EY: April 15, 2004
N3KIP: May 1, 2004 (first prediction)
KC8PMX: July 1, 2004
WA2ISE: August 1, 2004
K3LT: September 15, 2004
WK3C: December 30, 2004
N4PGW: May 22, 2005
N8UZE: July 1, 2005 (first prediction)
N3KIP: December 31, 2005 (second prediction)
N8UZE: January 31, 2006 (second prediction)
N2EY: March 1, 2006 (second prediction)
KB9RQZ: April 1, 2006
K2UNK: July 1, 2006 (second prediction)
AB2RC: July 1, 2007
KB3EIA: July 5, 2007
W5TIT: June 1, 2008
WA2SI: Complete elimination not within the foreseeable future (second prediction)

Anybody already on the list want to add a prediction? If so, the "rolling rule" (thanks Dee, N8UZE) applies:

If your prediction on this list is a year or more in the past, you can add a new one.

At this point everyone before and including WK3C can add a new prediction.

All predictions stay on the list.

It really makes no difference because the reality is that about 66% favor ending code for General. Given an absolute majority opinion ro end code... at least for General, then we can be sure the FCC isn't going to retain any code at all because to do so once again means a reinstatement of code medica waivers.

Does anyone think otherwise?

Bottom line again is "who cares?" In the scheme of things the results as tabulated by etiher Len or Joe are a solid base for the end of code testing. The "let's keep it just for Extra" group isn't even united on what speed it should be. Most will accept (IMHO) retention of 5wpm for Extra, but some have called for a return to the days of yesteryear and would like 13 or 20wpm.

IF the code test isn't dropped totally, the president for waivers in the absence of any treaty requirement will rule. Inactivity in response to the treatty change by the FCC can certainly be chalked up to digestion of the host of petitions filed after WRC and the ultimate issuance of NPRM 98-235 which is now pending.

IF (let's be hypothetical) the FCC did retain code for Extra, then the American Disabilities Act (ADA) will surely be raised by someone who need only point to the use of waivers previously and no court in this country would rule against such a clain.

What is Ham Radio?

Ham Radio is a technical pursuit for those who are interested in the science of radio wave propagation and who are also interested in the way that their radios function. It has a long-standing tradition of providing a source of engineers who are born naturals.

Ham Radio awakens in its aficionados a whole-life fascination with all things technical and gives an all-abiding curiosity to improve one's scientific knowledge. It's a great swimming pool, please dive in!

This excitement causes a wish to share the experience with ones fellow man, and shows itself in the gentlemanly traditions of Ham Radio.

Radio Hams are in a unique privileged position in that they can construct and operate their own equipment! No-one else has this privilege. Users, such as broadcasters, the po lice and armed farces, CBers and mobile phone users have to purchase ready-made gear. Manufacturers are not licensed to operate their gear. Radio Hams are qualified to design, build and then operate their own pieces of equipment. They do this with gusto, and also repair and modify their own equipment. This is a privilege well worth the effort to gain, and one to be jealously guarded.

The excitement that drives a Radio Ham starts with relatively simple technologies at first, perhaps making his own Wimshurst machine and primary cells. Small pieces of test equipment follow, possibly multimeters and signal generators. Then comes receivers and transmitters. It is with the latter that communication with like-minded technically motivated people takes off. The scope for technical development grows with the years and now encompasses DSP and DDS. There is also a great deal of excitement in the areas of computer programming to be learnt and applied.

The technical excitement motivates Radio Hams to compete with each other to determine who has designed and manufactured
the best-quality station. This competitiveness is found in DXing, competitions and fox-hunts.

-----OOOOO----

However, beware! A Ham Radio licence is such a desirable thing to have that there are large numbers of people who wish to be thought of as Radio Hams when, in fact, they are nothing of the kind! Usually such people are a variation of the CB Radio hobbyist; they buy their radios off the shelf and send them back to be repaired; they are not interested in technical discussion and sneer at those who are; they have no idea how their radios work inside and have no wish to find out;
they are free with rather silly personal insults;
they have not satisfied any technical qualification and their licences prevent the use of self-designed-and-built equipment.

These CB types engage in the competitive activities with their Cheque-Book-purchased off-the-shelf radios
in a forlorn effort to prove that they are Radio Hams.

No _REAL_ Radio Hams are deceived by such people!

-----ooooo-----

One infallible way to disambiguate the CB Radio Hobbyist from the _REAL_ Radio Ham is to solicit their view of the difference between CB Radio and Ham Radio. A Radio Ham will perceive Ham Radio to be a technical pursuit and will perceive CB Radio to be a social communications facility no different in essence to a land-line telephone or a GSM mobile in the hands of a 6-year-old. Thus a Radio Ham could also hold a CB licence safe in the knowledge that such a licence says no more about him than having a land-line telephone, whilst continuing to regard Ham Radio as a separate technical pursuit.

A CB Radio hobbyist, on the other hand, sees no difference between a Ham Radio licence and a CB Radio licence. To him, they are sisters-under-the-skin. Wrongly, the CB Radio Hobbyist then tries to classify himself as the equal of the Radio Ham when, in fact, he is nothing of the kind. A sure sign of a CB Radio hobbyist is if he holds, or has ever held, a licence issued under the gangrenous degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme.

-----ooooo-----

One group of people who claim to be of the standard of Radio Hams but who are in reality nothing more than an apology for the failure of a CBer are those class B licensees who falsely proclaimed that they were against the use of a Morse Test to control access to the HF bands, until, that is, a test was introduced at their intellectual level, the intellectual level of 6-year-olds.

6 year-olds simply lack the mathematical tool kit to enable them to handle even the simplest algebraic manipulation for Ohm's Law and thus, the disgraceful Class Ber's in the aforementioned category are not Radio Hams by any stretch of the imagination!

Remember - A sure sign of a CB Radio hobbyist is if he holds,
or has ever held, a licence issued under the gangrenous
degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme!

It also includes an interest in communication, that being the primary

Wrong. As a BE I have designed, constructed and operated two broadcast transmitters. Anyone can build and operate equipment for any purpose provided the equipment meets government criteria and has been certificated (or otherwise authorized), and the operator has the proper license or authorization.

And under those rules, Part 15 (as well as the UK equivalent) gives hobbyists the opportunity to build and operate their own equipment
-without- a license at much lower power. That's not necessarily a bad thing; those who have challenged the limitations of the 1750m band have made significant technical advancements that have spilled over into the field of Amateur radio. Part 15 also allows broadcasting with very low power; broadcasting is prohibited for Amateurs except in very special circumstances.

> Manufacturers

Wrong. They -MUST- hold a license or proper authorization to operate their equipment for the simple reason that it must be tested.

> Radio Hams

Radio Amateurs.....

>are qualified to design, build and then

Wrong. An Amateur license does not QUALIFY them to design or build anything. ANYONE can design and build their own equipment. Amateurs are AUTHORIZED to OPERATE their own equipment, and then ONLY if the equipment meets certain technical standards as set forth under the rules regulating Amateur radio.

Notwithstanding the negative connotations, you described CB radio very well. The Citizen's Band is -intended- for people who want to buy their radios off the shelf -- not caring about how they work or any other technical aspects beyond basic functionality. It's a plug-n-play radio service. And no license is required (in the US).

The "waivers previously" were only for the 13/20 WPM tests, and required the applicant to have passed a 5 WPM test. TTBOMK there has never been any waiver of 5 WPM, thus no precedent in support of such a claim.

That certainly seems to be the one. Nice and colorful, looks great
in any GUI display. :-)

Joe Speroni (AH0A) has to be taken for what he is: An absolute
morseman who values morse code skill over everything else in United States amateur radio. Speroni is also a Petitioner to the FCC who has yet to have his Petitions granted. <shrug> :-)

I put Speroni into a category of one who has a LOT of emotional baggage tied up in morse code and code testing.

>If it is, N2EY's blustering is a puzzlement because the results at that >site are strikingly similar to your tabulation, with 45% fully in favor >of the NRPM (drop the test) and 55% in favor of keeping some level of >CW testing.

No "puzzlement" to me. :-) Jimmie has been consistently against on just about everything I've ever written in here.
Since I am NOT in favor of morse code testing (as are several others), he loves to "get on my (and their's) case" to show
"how mistaken" I (and they) am.

Jimmie ("N2EY," which any day might become his legal name) has now resorted to attacking my choice of residence (the one I chose in May of 1963) and attempts ridicule of that location by partial lyrics of an old pop song ("little houses made of ticky-tacky"). :-) TS. I'll turn my collar around and get out my punch for his card. [he's probably never heard of the
"TS Card" that was common in the military]

Speroni's "Analysis" is probably no more "flawed" than mine.
The difference is in his categorization and the fact that he has NOT posted it in here. I began posting results almost daily from the beginning of August; Speroni has ONE display and MUST be taken as "accurate" (since he is an unabashed morse code advocate). Speroni hasn't been subjected to the heckling I've received in here on a regular basis since September. :-)

Speroni counts REPLIES to Comments as "duplicates" in order to arrive at a code-favored percentage in his "results." We could extend that to questionable categorization of husband-wife teams filing separately...but that effort isn't worth the time wasted for "accuracy." There's also some obvious (if one checks the posted address) of family members filing separately. Lots and lots of variations of "inaccuracy" charges possible!

Note also the subtle biasing of the icon indicators on Speroni's "analysis" sheet. All those against code testing have the red slant bar across them. All those for code testing are green or blue with no ("do not do") red slant bars. Those for-code icons are also clear, nothing to show that they are the exact OPPOSITE of the NPRM. :-)

My "percentage" was shown strictly as an INDICATOR of the opinion. What the FCC uses for decisions is up to them. My "score card" isn't "official." Neither is Speroni's.

If anyone bothered to look at my continuing series of "score card" postings, they would have seen a most decided "FOR" position on the NPRM early in the comment period (better than 2:1). By the official notice date in the Federal Register, VERY late in my opinion, the pro-code-test comments had increased but not yet achieved "supremacy" over the no-code-test comments OR the "code test for extra" folks.

Here's an important fact AND a big unknown about the comments: According to the statements in both the NPRM and Federal Register, the comment period begins ONLY on the FR notice date. WE citizens don't know if the FCC will consider all those comments made BEFORE the notice date! If the FCC doesn't, then the number of CONSIDERED filings drop to nearly half and the "percentages" get skewed. Speroni did NOT mention that in his "analysis." I did, from day one of the FR notice. The Federal Register notices are legally binding on federal law, regulations, and rules.

>He classifies the valid responses on the same basis as you ("For NRPM",
>"Keep the current test", and "Extra Only"). Then he has three >categories of "Others" which aren't included in his tally (Dupes and >other junk).

Speroni has NOT "classified" or even included 10 filings that showed up under 31 Oct 05, all done by LAW STUDENTS. As of 2 PM EDT on 4 Nov 05, those "moot court" exercise papers number 17 (3 are unidentified as to individual and were copied and filed as one filing by the FCC). The total number of filings up to the official end of Comments period are now 3,697, not the lower number Speroni shows for today.

All this doesn't matter in RRAP as far as Miccolis is concerned. Anyone favoring code testing is "accurate" to him and anyone not favoring code testing is "inaccurate!"

Quod erat demonstrandum (for years in here). :-)

Plus, we MUST be "accurate!" [don't forget that]

In the spirit of sustaining "accuracy," I have NOT had a "LIFELONG interest in radio." I had a moderate interest in it (all of electronics really) until my Army assignment posted me to a major Army radio communications facility in early February 1953. I was then 20, rather out of "teen-age" years. Bingo, BIG TIME INTEREST from then on! So big I was on the road to changing my career goals when I got out of the Army in 1956. See:

http://kauko.hallikainen.org/history/equipment/stations/
My3Years.pdf

Made a "big mistake" (according to a mighty macho motivated morseman in here) in getting a professional radio license in '56, not an amateur one. Tsk, tsk.
Worse yet, I got a JOB in radio that year to do REAL WORK with that license! [horrors, how un-ham-like!]

Never used morse code, never had to in the Army. Never used morse code, or had to, in my career since...which included "working" a station ON the moon. [real DX]

The ONLY reason waivers were not extended down to 5wpm in the past was because the FCC believed the USA could not waive the minimal code test because of the treaty. Now that there is no treaty requirement, the logic that lead to waivers of 13/20 wpm can and would be extended to a 5wpm test IF such test remains. The president stands based on the general application of waivers for non-treaty established code speeds.

Last I checked the president stands in the white house. Also last I checked there was no precedent for a waiver of 5 word-per-min.

In any case, I'd agree that invoking ADA might work --- to require possibility of test waivers for disabled, but not to disallow testing outright.

I say it depends on what the question is. If you're talking about the General, there's a clear majority to eliminate the code test for that license. But if you're talking about the Extra, there's a clear majority to keep the code test for that license.

If you're talking about complete code test elimination, which the NPRM proposes, there's a clear majority against that.

I disagree!

The medical waivers came about because of the request of a now-dead King to a president who left office 13 years ago, ADA had nothing to do with it IIRC.

> Does anyone think otherwise?

Yes - me.

If medical waivers were a consideration, FCC could have immediately reinstituted them in July 2003, claiming that the only reason they didn't exist before was the treaty. But they didn't.

Obviously Len does - just look at how he carries on about it.....

For General, yes. For Extra, the opposite is true.

But as we both know, FCC is under no mandate to follow the majority opinion.

379. In Praise of Contesting

This weekend is the ARRL November Sweepstakes (SS) on CW. I plan to be on the air, making as many points as possible. SS is perhaps my favorite contest, because it requires a real exchange (4 pieces of info besides the callsign, and the signal report is not part of the exchange.) I also like it because even a modest station can get a big score.

The fall and winter also bring out a lot of anti-contest and anti-DX complaints. Some of them may be justified - not every contester or DXer is 100% courteous 100% of the time.

But a lot of the technical progress in ham radio, particularly on HF/MF, has come about because of contesters and DXers.

Compare a typical midrange HF ham transceiver of today with one from the '60s or '70s and consider how many features and performance improvements came about because DXers and contesters pushed for them, developed them, and paid for them. Better filters, better dynamic range, multiple VFOs, memories, I/O ports, no-tune-up operation, separate rx antenna inputs, and much much more can all be traced at least in part to the needs and wants of contesters and DXers.

Want to compare numbers? Check out how differently the receivers of old and new ham rigs perform:

http://www.sherweng.com/table.html

Is there a computer in your shack? One of the first widespread uses of computers in hamshacks was to keep contest logs. Memory keyer? Developed for contesting.

There are lots more examples but you get the idea.

Of course a lot of these features first appear in the top-of-the-line rigs that most of us cannot afford. But then they work their way down to the lower-priced stuff as the technology matures and the development costs are paid off.

Whether you like contests and DXing or not, they do contribute to the ARS.

RS(T) is a standard "piece" of info. A QSO would not be complete without it, IN MY OPINION. If there are any ARRL card checkers out there, is a card without a signal report valid?

Regardless of contest, a modest station only competes with itself.

It matters not. What matteres is the Jim Miccolis/N2EY has a platform to attempt to discredit Len under any and every circumstance. Another $1 says thats the truth.

Indeed it does but this is the very, very first time you've mentioned

How do we know that? If that precedent really existed, why didn't FCC institute waivers as soon as the treaty requirement ended? They wouldn't need an NPRM - they could cite the 1990-2000 procedures and just change
the words for "5 wpm".

Maybe - but if there really was a precedent, FCC could cite it, but they haven't.

Sure!

IANAL, but was ADA ever successfully cited before against an FCC decision? An amateur license isn't a right - only access to the tests for one is.

Waivers of any kind are a real quagmire because they say the waivered test isn't really necessary for the license. What's to prevent someone for demanding a waiver of the Extra written test?

> >> That's a path that FCC just won't go down.

> > Probably not.

> PLEASE explain on what legal or rational basis the > FCC could argue to avoid a waiver policy if code

Several:

First off, I don't think ADA has ever been successfully cited against FCC regulations

Second, an amateur radio license isn't a commercial thing, so it's not like someone is denied a job or similar.

Third, Extra does not give any more power, modes, bands or other operating privileges except a little more frequency spectrum. There's also the vanity call selection and the ability to VE other Extras, but that's about it.

Fourth and most important, there's no absolute right to an amateur radio license. It's a privilege - only access to the tests is a right.

As an analogy, consider the national parks. There are places where access to the park by motor vehicle is not allowed. Does ADA require that all parts of all parks be accessible by motor vehicle
because some people can't walk to them?

I do. In fact I think it would solve a lot of problems.

Just check the ARRL website. All that is required are the band, mode, call signs and date. No RST is required.

Woger didn't much like the place anyway. That darned wood floor left slivers in his knees every time he'd crawl under someone's booth to smooch something else.

Do you send signal reports during repeater QSO's? If not, when will

A card for DXCC credit must contain the callsign (of both stations), the location (DXCC entity) of the QSL-sending station, the date/time of the QSO, the frequency or band, and the mode. RST is not a required element for the QSO to be valid for DXCC.

That certainly seems to be the one. Nice and colorful, looks great
in any GUI display. :-)

Joe Speroni (AH0A) has to be taken for what he is: An absolute
morseman who values morse code skill over everything else in United States amateur radio. Speroni is also a Petitioner to the FCC who has yet to have his Petitions granted. <shrug> :-)

I put Speroni into a category of one who has a LOT of emotional baggage tied up in morse code and code testing.

>If it is, N2EY's blustering is a puzzlement because the results at that >site are strikingly similar to your tabulation, with 45% fully in favor >of the NRPM (drop the test) and 55% in favor of keeping some level of >CW testing.

No "puzzlement" to me. :-) Jimmie has been consistently
against on just about everything I've ever written in here.
Since I am NOT in favor of morse code testing (as are several others), he loves to "get on my (and their's) case" to show
"how mistaken" I (and they) am.

Jimmie ("N2EY," which any day might become his legal name) has
now resorted to attacking my choice of residence (the one I chose in May of 1963) and attempts ridicule of that location by partial lyrics of an old pop song ("little houses made of ticky-tacky"). :-) TS. I'll turn my collar around and get out my punch for his card. [he's probably never heard of the
"TS Card" that was common in the military]

Speroni's "Analysis" is probably no more "flawed" than mine.
The difference is in his categorization and the fact that he has NOT posted it in here. I began posting results almost daily from the beginning of August; Speroni has ONE display and MUST be taken as "accurate" (since he is an unabashed morse code advocate). Speroni hasn't been subjected to the heckling I've received in here on a regular basis since September. :-)

Speroni counts REPLIES to Comments as "duplicates" in order to arrive at a code-favored percentage in his "results." We could extend that to questionable categorization of husband-wife teams filing separately...but that effort isn't worth the time wasted for "accuracy." There's also some obvious (if one checks the posted address) of family members filing separately. Lots and lots of variations of "inaccuracy" charges possible!

Note also the subtle biasing of the icon indicators on Speroni's "analysis" sheet. All those against code testing have the red slant bar across them. All those for code testing are green or blue with no ("do not do") red slant bars. Those for-code icons are also clear, nothing to show that they are the exact OPPOSITE of the NPRM. :-)

My "percentage" was shown strictly as an INDICATOR of the opinion. What the FCC uses for decisions is up to them. My "score card" isn't "official." Neither is Speroni's.

If anyone bothered to look at my continuing series of "score card" postings, they would have seen a most decided "FOR" position on the NPRM early in the comment period (better than 2:1). By the official notice date in the Federal Register, VERY late in my opinion, the pro-code-test comments had increased but not yet achieved "supremacy" over the no-code-test comments OR the "code test for extra" folks.

Here's an important fact AND a big unknown about the comments: According to the statements in both the NPRM and Federal Register, the comment period begins ONLY on the FR notice date. WE citizens don't know if the FCC will consider all those comments made BEFORE the notice date! If the FCC doesn't, then the number of CONSIDERED filings drop to nearly half and the "percentages" get skewed. Speroni did NOT mention that in his "analysis." I did, from day one of the FR notice. The Federal Register notices are legally binding on federal law, regulations, and rules.

>He classifies the valid responses on the same basis as you ("For NRPM",
>"Keep the current test", and "Extra Only"). Then he has three >categories of "Others" which aren't included in his tally (Dupes and >other junk).

Speroni has NOT "classified" or even included 10 filings that showed up under 31 Oct 05, all done by LAW STUDENTS.
As of 2 PM EDT on 4 Nov 05, those "moot court" exercise papers number 17 (3 are unidentified as to individual and were copied and filed as one filing by the FCC). The total number of filings up to the official end of Comments period are now 3,697, not the lower number Speroni shows for today.

All this doesn't matter in RRAP as far as Miccolis is concerned. Anyone favoring code testing is "accurate" to him and anyone not favoring code testing is "inaccurate!"

Quod erat demonstrandum (for years in here). :-)

No, I'm not.

Your team mate, Sir Markie of Paganopolis did. He was the one who started the thread about you being "paid up" on some non-existant wager. Talk to him and get your attriburtions right, Brain.

You should know. Your record is a long one.

Talking to yourself is an obvious symptom. Take your own advice.

The 37 year old telephone linewoman next door to you is probably a shemale. Have you peeped in her windows yet to see? That's what I do when a girl moves into one of the houses on my street of Glen Haven Avenue in Glendale, and that's how I know who they are. Shemales are really, really sexy. I post lots of photos of them on NIM Busters.

Where are you pulling THIS gem from?

And regardless of the legality of abortions, the BoN could care

Try again, Markie.

And while you're doing that, I am going to try and find what

The precident is for waivers of code testing of non-treaty required code knowledge. It matters not if that was 20, 13 or now 5wpm. Conceptually the precident is there.

The waivers in the past were only for disabled with a medical Agreed!

My point is that it's not a done deal until they actually do it. And if there were no question, they'd have done it already.

In any event, the NPRM indicates that FCC is strongly predisposed to just eliminate Element 1 - and make no other changes.

with majority opinion.

55% is more than "just barely". Most US presidential elections are a lot closer (in the popular vote).

Nor I. But the fact is that the majority opinion does not support complete elimination of the Morse Code test.

No. I live in a restricted neighborhood. My antennas are ready to

Are you going to operate a tube radio for the contest?

Correct. He asked for my address.

Specifically, he said "Brain, and Todd I'll have your address..."

No rant. FACT.

I don't trust you. You have been warned away from visiting my home or mailing anything to me.

"Sorry Hans, MARS >>>IS<<< Amateur Radio" and your six months of backpedalling should make you more knowledgeable about what backpedalling is.

But since you want to squander your hard earned talents and characterize my comments as "backpedalling" you have proven yourself once again to be deceitful and a liar.

> And "anti-everything"...?!?!

Anti-everything that I say or type. Anti-everything that Len says or types. Anti-everything that Mark says or types. Anti-everything that Todd says or types. You tolerate nothing from anyone who disagrees with you.

I suggest you rethink your position.

Mail nothing to me. Anything that I receive from you will be opened by the Sheriff, as I've warned previously. Google provides earlier warnings.

I'm curious, do you have a history of harassing other people on RRAP?

Correction; I meant harassing them outside of the newsgroup?

I'm just recalling some facts, Len. You've tried and tried to impress with your alleged 'years in computer-modem communications' but in fact you couldn't get ECFS to accept your filing back then. And you make a lot of noise about when other people comment but in fact you only sent in Reply Comments to that NPRM.

You keep bringing up history from a half-century ago, Len, as if it had some relevance. Are you saying your 1998 Reply Comments are irrelevant to amateur radio policy? If so, many will agree!

Your opinions are not backed by any facts, then. So we should treat them appropriately....

It's what you said then and still defend. It's relevant to your "opinions".

Why not admit your mistake and say you were wrong, and your opinions have no basis in fact? Because that's the case, Len.

You're not the boss here, Len. Probably not the boss anywhere....

Show us an example. A direct link to a posting would be good.

Posting documented facts isn't claiming expertise.

Point is, you exaggerated the threat you were under. And you didn't check your facts before posting. It took me only seconds to find out the relevant facts. One would think someone with your alleged 'years of experience in computer-modem communications' would have checked
the facts before posting.

There's also the issue of how you treat someone who points out your mistakes. You behave in a very unprofessional manner, Len.

To quote your classic "sphincters post":

'You knew the job was dangerous when you took it'

> But, WHAT DOES IT MATTER on the type of Soviet aircraft > involved then?

You exaggerated the threat you were under, Len.

> YOU were NOT INVOLVED. YOU were NEVER IN > THE MILITARY!

Doesn't change the fact that you were mistaken.

And btw....

People of my generation grew up knowing that we were under the constant threat of nuclear annihilation from missile attacks against which there was essentially no defense. The missiles would arrive in minutes, not hours, and if they did the job we'd all be dust. Growing up in a big city halfway between the nation's capital and the nation's largest city, I knew there was little point in fallout shelters and such, because we were within range of both land- and submarine-launched Soviet missiles, and a prime target.

Fortunately sanity prevailed.

So don't lecture me about the Soviet nuclear threat, Len old boy, because I grew up with it. You didn't.

True - up to a point.

It can also be argued that the precedent is limited only to 'higher-speed' code tests, and not to code testing in general.
IOW, there's a difference between a waiver of a higher level of skill vs. a complete waiver of the skill.

As an analogy, there have been cases (not amateur radio)
where a disabled person was given additional time to complete a test that, for everyone else, had a strict time limit.
```

That person essentially got a waiver of the time limit but not of the test itself.

Opponents of the waiver said that the time limit was an integral part of the test.

> > Also last I checked there was no precedent for a waiver of 5 word-per-min.

But only for higher-speed tests, not for the basic skill itself.

Which took the form of a letter from any M.D. or D.O. stating that it would take the person longer-than-usual to reach the skill level necessary to pass the 13 or 20 wpm code test. There was no requirement of an actual documented disability, nor that the disability would make it impossible for the person to pass the test.
Nor did the disability have to be permanent and/or untreatable. The doctor didn't have to write the letter, just sign it. Nor did the doctor
need any particular qualifications to make the judgement.

I don't know of anyone who sought a medical waiver who was denied if they had the required doctor's letter.

Most of all, the waivers did not come about because of ADA.

For the record, the exchange consists of:

Serial number of QSO starting with 1 as the first SS QSO of the contest
Entry Class
Callsign
Section (there are 80 of them)
Year first licensed

In addition the log shall record the date and time of QSO and the band used.

Stations can only work each other once per contest. Using a spotting network of any kind puts you in a different entry class.

Other rules and requirements at the ARRL website.

My first SS was 1968. Was fun then and still is fun now.

Oooooooohhhhhh!

We hit a bit close to HOME, did we, Tom?

>>I<< didn't say ANYTHING about being inadeqaute for ME. I placed that onus upon those who find it necessary to resort to "shock-jock" antics

Take an Ativan, Tom. That's my professional suggestion.

nope

the real issue is that Stevie has LIED about the legality of a medical procedure

I am not accusing him of conducting back alley abortion

I admit it: I've been in an ugly mood ever since 1996, and I let it spill over into Usenet during the intervening years.

Mark, Steve, Dave, Lloyd, Wes, Schwartz, Vietnam Dan and all the rest of you, let's have a group hug. After that, I'll feel a lot better, and I won't berate you motherfucking assholes any more.

well been digging the archives on Stevie located some 105 posst of his misdeeds dumping a lot of the repitivie stuff

some of the gems

the false stament that abortion is a ilegal

setvie saying someone should take an med in his professional opinion

stevie claiming people other than myself have aids

stevie claiming someone beside myself is gay

Stevie advocating suicide I am sure they love that one

Stevie seems to think he will be able to defends his lies by claiming
I lied or Len and the tooth fary lied

stevie LPN will be challenged based on Stevie's own words indeed it is stevie that told it could be, a point tennessee seesm to agree with the form they want filled out arrvied yesterday I think i have combed

as much out of Google as I can stand in short I don't think Stevie is fit to be nurse, will shall se what tennessee think after i hack through all these post highlight the relavant passages and forwrd them for tthier review

just a good citiizen should

feel free to resume threatening me now stevie

Along with yours, Colonel, including your repetitive assertions on the validity of deceit and lying...Considering the nature of your "complaint", that ought to really open some eyes.

Stevie showing where those other people have provided proof they are.

I am sure they love the fact that it's legal in some places.

And we'll be sure to keep this post to show them your intent to
"hack through" them.

What would you know about being a good citizen, Markie?

> feel free to resume threatening me now stevie

No threats, Markie...Just a promise to fully deprive you of any/all resources and assets the courts may allow for your culpable actions.

BTW...Since this "action" is taking place in Tennessee, you are going to have to travel to Tennessee. Do you intend to retain local counsel? Or shall we just serve you personally and then have you held IN Tennessee as a flight risk?

See ya!

it isn't aout ME Stevie

get that through your head

You have no reason to say that Todd's dad has AIDS

even if I am lying in every post I make you have no reason to say todd's father has AIDS

Now we know what is wrong with Woger. He suffers from Asperger's Syndrome. This would explain his lack of social and communications skills. Now, don't you feel sorry for him?

A. Qualitative impairment in social interaction, as manifested by at least two of the following:

1.. marked impairments in the use of multiple nonverbal behaviors such as eye-to-eye gaze, facial expression, body postures, and gestures to regulate social interaction
2.. failure to develop peer relationships appropriate to developmental level
3.. a lack of spontaneous seeking to share enjoyment, interests, or achievements with other people (e.g. by a lack of showing, bringing, or pointing out objects of interest to other people)
4.. lack of social or emotional reciprocity
B. Restricted repetitive and stereotyped patterns of behavior, interests, and activities, as manifested by at least one of the following:

1.. encompassing preoccupation with one or more stereotyped and restricted patterns of interest that is abnormal either in intensity or focus
2.. apparently inflexible adherence to specific, nonfunctional routines or rituals
3.. stereotyped and repetitive motor mannerisms (e.g., hand or finger flapping or twisting, or complex whole-body movements)
4.. persistent preoccupation with parts of objects
C. The disturbance causes clinically significant impairment in social, occupational, or other important areas of functioning

Nope, none. Not even morris code, not morris the cat, not even with threats of the whouff-hong and the rettysnitch.

Wonder if Dudly the Imposter has logged onto Setiathome yet? TRUE radio astronomy going on there. Seti has already found dozens of repetitive signal sources all over the sky,
have that available at http://setiathome.berkeley.edu.
Right now I'm on my 422nd data unit, running it in the background. Each one takes about 11 hours on a 2 GHz clock computer for the "classic" (older) version of supplied software. Each data unit represents only 104 seconds of time at any particular point in the sky. I'm also running Seti in the background using BOINC, the Berkeley Open Infrastructure software (also free) and am on the 2nd data unit with that.

With the classic version, participants can get a nice little certificate (suitable for framing) after completing 100, 250, or 1000 hours of CPU time. Just the ticket for self-propelled self-defined expert braggarts to show their "expertise" in radio astronomy. :-)

In a way, I'm glad Jimmie isn't involved in Seti. If an ET was ever found, Jimmie would try to argue his case for morse code with them, piss off ET, and Earth would likely face Annihilation! :-)

ADA wasn't needed because the FCC had already provided a waiver process.

Anyone can demand anything. On your first statement regarding waivers being a quagmire...I agree and that's exactly why the FCC isn't going to retain any code testing.

So? It hasn't been needed on any FCC basis yet.

ADA is not simply about jobs...it is about "access"
on a broad basis.

That's a contradictory statement. You say there's no additional privileges and then you note that there is.

Ditto my last.

I think any good ADA attorney would argue otherwise.

ADA calls for reasonable accomodation where it can be done.
Your national park analogy doesn't apply.

There is, IMHO, no question...just the process which is, as I've said, just slow government process.

And I have seen nothing offered in any comments that will, IMHO, change that.

Agreed... BUT there is no longer ANY international treaty requirement for even a basic skill which, I believe, is exactly why we have an open (almost closed now)
NPRM addressing ending ALL code testing.
It is also why, IMHO, the FCC won't go with any code test at all for Extra.

And again, the basic skill was, in the past, an ITU treaty requirement. It ain't anymore.

Agreed..and such was "my" intent regarding medical certficiation.

Nor would they (IMHO) in the future IF any code test remains.

Agreed as to the past.

448. K1MAN & AARA/IARU To Stop BPL

K1MAN BULLETIN - B051026B -

UPDATE FROM THE AMERICAN AMATEUR RADIO ASSOCIATION (AARA) AND INTERNATIONAL AMATEUR RADIO NETWORK (IARN)

K1MAN and his team at AARA/IARN, being America's largest amateur radio society are going to take on the big guns and challenge bpl. They, with all their vast experience and technical expertise plan to challenge the FCC and the BPL operators. This is revealed in the latest issue of K1MAN's newsletter that promises tells all that cannot be published elsewhere. He is naming names and telling it just like it really is for 45 US a year. Jesus christ, MAN, it's what, 2 pages of photocopy paper and a stamp x 12. Damn expensive dunny paper mate.

AARA President, Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, says that the "ARRL haven't done enough" and lack the skills necessary to challenge bpl and the big power companies. K1MAN believes the AARA have the people and skills to lead a fight against the BPL operators. Glenn Baxter believes he can become the savior of amateur hf communications, given his vast experience in fighting and dealing with the FCC and communications legislation. The AARA, like all other amateur societies across the globe have carried out extensive testing, research and debate on BPL since it's early days. AARA was active in filing complaints with regulatory bodies across the world, reinforcing the position taken by local amateur bodies.

K1MAN says, unlike the ARRL, the key to it all is lawyers, lawyers and more bloody lawyers. K1MAN plans to solve the problems with the FCC, both the BPL and his own by using lawyers. That's right K1MAN, when there's a problem a lawyer can fix it. "Just what the world needs son, more bloody lawyers."

Others argue that K1MAN and his love for lawyers may actually be more of a problem than a benefit. It must cost the AARA a bloody fortune for legal advice every five minutes. I wonder if K1MAN is also head of the AARA's lawyers department. I have a landline in my bedroom, in MAN Land that's called a switchboard.

As can be seen from the extensive web site and submissions on bpl to regulatory bodies, the AARA will be the body to fight bpl, and K1MAN will lead the fight. From his gaol cell that is.

K1MAN has team with Toadfish and the N9OGL Show to provide updates on BPL operations from the audio room....of the local prison. Listen for the "MANTOAD" Bulletins....

After release K1MAN plans to be the next President of the US, an astronaut, astronomer, radio broadcaster, engineer, research scientist, tv news anchor, dj, and whatever else he may wake up each day, wishing he was, on his way to the welfare office.

When I was a kid I used to pull up weeds, put them in pots and pretend to sell them. I grew up. Stop pretending to be something you aren't Glenn.

BTW, as your AARA/IARN is an amateur society I'm wondering who on your committee represents your members to the IARU and World Radio Conferences.

Perhaps the ARRL were behind your latest NAL K1MAN, you know with you been such a hugh threat to their numbers and all.

Any nong can form a company and be a director of it. Gee, I can go out today, go to a government office hand them AU$60 and get a Registered Organisation Certificate for, let's say "Australian Amateur Radio Association-or AARA" and make myself President, Director, Manager, whatever the hell I like. It does not mean that I am actually good at it or can serve any real purpose.

Seems that K1MAN is the "George" (aka 'Sienfield') of Amateur Radio. Next he'll be printing a daily newsletter on his laser printer and calling himself a metropolitan daily newspaper that's circulating across America, when in fact he means his street.

When down, visit http://www.k1man.com for a good ol laugh. It's bloody hillarous.

Future AARA President :)

That is essentially true also for the US. The amateur license is ONLY needed for "on-the-air" operation of a transmitter.
In contrast, anyone can construct and operate a reciever.

I think that can be generally said as true also for the US.

And I said have at it, Markie.

The Board is obligated to review all complaints it receives. If you really ARE stupid enough to file an official complaint, they WILL review it.

And when they do, whatever you sent them becomes a matter of public record.

Then whey THEY are done with it, my attorneys get to play with it.

> and no way you are making a malice case out quoting you to the nursing > board

Easy pickings, Markie.

Your "complaint" will be dispositioned as a retaliatory action on your part.

And when they have closed it, my attorneys get the package. Then you get to drive to Tennessee for the civil case that will follow. Of course you can just sit up in the UP thinking that nothing will happen to you, but hey, it's your reality!

> > BTW...Since this "action" is taking place in Tennessee, you are

> re read the above

YOU "re-read the above"

YOU will have to come to Tennessee to testify. While you're here, I'll ahve you served with the civil action. The flight risk issue will be a certainty.

Gotcha!

> you are really losing it Stevie
>
> a flight risk on a civil action ?

Nope. The civil action is just what >>I<< will be persuing for damages. Remember what I told you DAYS ago about what happens to people who file malicious retaliatory complaints? THAT is criminal.

> you are out of your mind

Nope.

> if by some strech of the imagine nation you are talking about a > criminal complaint then you over look extradiction and other legal > niceities

Not if you're already here to testify on the original "complaint"...And Markie, I DO have the right to face you in a hearing..You file a complaint in Tennessee, and Tennessee is where you're going to have to go to testify. You don't show, the complaint is dismissed and I STILL get to file a civil complaint on the malicious complaint charge!

And once you're here on the original complaint the courts can order you to remain here. Otherwise you're in contempt of court. Those follow you across state lines too.

> you are just plain stupid Stevie

Keep telling yourself that, Markie...Keep hoping....Keep asking yourself, "...is this really worth it?"

Yep, he even used "professional" to describe that he wasn't just some yahoo, but a medical professional.

Yes, it's a reasonably common theme that seems to have been totally missed by this chap. It makes one wonder if he has a full grasp of his Licence conditions

The other thing to be aware of is that this chap, in this sock-puppet and his innumerable previous ones, has alternately decried e.g contest operating as being the act of a "CBer", and then swung completely about and used it as a justification for the description of a 'radio ham'. I've lost count now of how many times this circle has been gone round. It must make anyone who is keen on becoming a 'radio ham' very confused, as the fundamental basis on which it is built changes so often!

It's only an even race if you count those who want to retain a code test for Extra only as being in the anti camp. I guarantee that the FCC will be able to think of no reason to retain it only for Extras. In your dreams, maybe.

One of them never served, but speaks of "real military service."
Another talks about the service that amateur radio gave during WWII, but as I read the history, Amateur Radio was shut down during WWII. I

I wonder where the law stands as far as CB radio's go. Are CB's allowed to be repaired by the average CB'er who has the knowledge or are they only repairable by a qualified technician of some kind. I ask along the lines of the UK but would find the answer for America just as interesting.

At least Len finally answered the citizenship question, although I'm not convinced by his answer.

As it happens (and many of you already know this) I'm not a US citizen myself. This means that I can't vote in federal elections, although beleive it or not, voting in local elections is upto local government to decide. In fact, I think that the states have the power to let aliens vote in federal, but not presidential elections, but none of them do any longer, although I understand it was common in pioneering times when few people were citizens. One city in this state does allow non-citizens to vote, but it's not the city I live in.

It would be nice to vote, but I am eligible to apply for citizenship at any time, so this is not a big issue for me. I prefer not to renounce my native citizenship, even though it would have no legal effect in itself, i.e. the UK doesn't recognise renunciation.

When it comes to FCC comment procedures, there is no system in place for checking the citizenship of anyone who posts a comment, and no longer any restriction on aliens holding a licence, although there once was, but that was before my time. Hence, if I post a comment it will be counted by the FCC, if not by Len. OTOH, if people don't post their citizenship (I don't when commenting to the FCC) Len won't know whether to include them or not (even though the FCC will). I think this is Jim's point, as it does reflect on the accuracy of the scorecard, albeit not enough to keep Element 1 from going West!

There is no deeper motive. Notice that Len Anderson has made no comment on my approach to using CW when the license structure changes. He chooses to comment on a section that is clearly identified as opinion. I'm entitled to my opinion just like any one else.

Notice that Len Anderson injects something into my post that was not there, was not implied, and has not been stated or implied in any of my posts. I am firmly in favor of first reponders responding first and other groups standing by until they are needed and then only going in if they are needed. However as you can see, rather than addressing the concept that I was discussing, Len Anderson has gone off on one of his tangents and trying to distract people from my actual statements. This is why I killfiled him long ago.

I see that you started the paragraph with "if so...." You are wise to doubt his statements. Investigate for yourself.

Len, I'm not a US citizen. The FCC doesn't ask for comments only from citizens. If they did I would respect that and not post any, beleive it or not, but they don't, so I do. They also have no means of checking. Plus I hold an FCC licence and live in the USA, and last of all, didn't attend a high school civics class here, ROTFL!

I can't answer your question, but perhaps this is one of those cases where it is better not to ask, but to carry on as before. Having a piece of gear repaired by a certified authority will probably cost more than buying a new one....

The same thing could be said about any topic that isn't rules, good operating practice, electrical safety or RF safety. A single license class and single test would suffice to easily cover those three areas. Afterall, whether or not the licensee knows how to detect or fix a problem does not let him get out of following the rules and being responsible for his operation.

However, the FCC continues to follow the concept that people need motivation beyond just personal curiosity to pursue the "self training" part of the basis and purpose. Code is as logical a choice as any other topic.

But I agree that the FCC will decide to drop code entirely if they choose to move forward.

Thanks for that, quick answer too :o)
I would agree about the cost from a Certified Authority as most CB's in the UK are only worth between $26 - $52 and the repair bill from a qualified
"tech" would be more than this... and would they indeed bother as they could make far more money with the same effort repairing other items more valuable...
I was just curious as to the legallity of repairing a CB. I wasnt admitting to anything.. honest .... ;o)

Graham

I am liberal jewish trash myself and proud of it. When Clinton sold pardons, took the whitehouse furniture and had his law license revoked it was a special time for America. But I became disillusioned when I found out about that hefty girl. Clinton could have had any shemale he wanted but instead he showed no taste and picked an ordinary fat girl to not have sex with. That's really disgusting. In Glendale, West Virginia we have higher standards. www.shemaleyard.com

496. Radio Legends Denounce Baxter

Leo Meyerson, founder of WRL and Galaxy Electronics says Glenn Baxter is apparently using his name and picture to generate publicity for AARA and IARN. Myerson says he's well aware of Baxter's activities and he completely disapproves! Myerson says he has no affiliation with ex-k1man and he never has had an affiliation. "Baxter butted into a conversation between me an my wife at Dayton and the clown wouldn't leave until we had our picture taken with him. To say I'm affiliated with Baxter is like saying Saddam Hussein is a member of the Boy Scouts. It's ridiculous."

Myerson is the second living legend to dnounce Baxter in the last 6 months. The first, Walter Cronkite, wrote a letter exposing Baxter's lack of ethics. Cronkite went on to ask the FCC to DENY FCC license renewal to k1man.

Glenn's sponge-boy and bath house attendant N9OGL reportedly responded to the news, saying, "I love Glenn, and the c0ckzugging FCC can byte me! When I move out of my parents basement, I plan to have an even better show than Baxter, and no panzy-azzes at the FCC can stop me neither. You'll see, you'll all see!"

Todd was later unavailable for comment and was said to be under heavy sedation at the Taylorville Hospital for the Criminally Potty-Mouthed.

retaliatory to what? after all you claim you have done nothing to me your use of the word of relaliatory would seem to indiacate that you are felling guility about something

my complaint will document my real concern that you have violated the rules of the tennesse BoN cchapter 1000-2 rules and reg of lpn's section 13 and 14

the TenN BoN will evaulate my material, and then take such action as they seem fit, assuming you are right and you can post all shit you have here without it being a concern to the BoN you will not be damaged in any way hence no case for you, OTOH if I am right and send them the right stuff and they act, they will damage you not me, and again no case for Stevie against me wrong again Stevie, assuming you can find an atttorney and a cause of action I am still not required to travel to Tennessee

If you get something that the court will try to serve me with that service will take place here (and I think you have to go to FEDERAL court but I may be worng) then I first make a pro se effort to have the case dismissed, failing that I will hire a lawyer able to practice in TN and/or the federal Courts as needed

If I have to blow the money on a retainer then I will also take a shot at suing you for the tort I believe you have done me with your threats lies harrasent and hate speech, and things will start getting expesive for you too

Greetings, I have found your comments to be so ridiculas and entertaining that I just had to weigh in. Let me introduce myself - I am who you have been referring to in various posts as Mrs. Markie. BTW, I am female at least the last time I checked. I also happen to be a trained paralegal and a 1L. First of all you are confusing the processes and methods of criminal legal cases with those of civil. You need to go clarify that before you make any more stupid comments. Try picking up a simple study guide on torts. 2nd, in this matter it is not Mark who would be bringing the action against you re: your license but the BON of TN - he is merely providing info so your cause of action if you do suffer damages from this proceeding would be against them, not Mark. 3rd, even if he is required to give a deposition in this matter he can do so from here in some fashion with modern technology. 4th, if you wish to bring a cause of action against Mark you first have to identify and quantify the real (legal term) damages that he ostensibly has or would have caused you which cannot occur until after the hearing by the BON (see above) you also would have to bring suit in a place that has jurisdiction over a resident of MI which is not the state of TN. For arguements sake, if you were able to bring suit in TN Mark still wouldn't have to come there - that's what attys are for and therefore you would have no course to arrange to have him held in TN as 'a flight risk' which is not a factor in a civil suit - another confusion you are making btwn civil and criminal law.

Check your facts Steve before you make more of an ass out of yourself than you are. If you actually have facts re: your legal knowledge citations would give you credibility which you are lacking.

signing off and returning you to KB9RQZ
Mrs. Markie, 3rd party traffic . . .

My wife is a bit wordy for this forum but i had trouble sorting out all your legal errors

Truely and in all kindness for your families sake TALK TO LAWYER SOON

>people who file malicious retaliatory complaints? THAT is criminal.

so you say and yet you also say you can fille your concerns with other states freely without criminal penality

you have even stated I can legaly file my concerns with the BoN in the past I dissmissed this at the time not believeing there was a cuase or rule they could use in this matter, when YOU pointed one out I (with help from Mrs Markie) went looking and found tha you may have in fact told the turth on that score for once

agin assuming somehow you can presaude the cops down there to try and trump up some charge (and your filling of any falsehood in your police report could get you in trouble remember) they would still have to go through the legal mechanism of extradicting me a very expense and time consuming problem

check your facts

not sure you have that right as I understand I should be able to be disposed like any other witness

check your facts

get your fact straight
>
> And once you're here on the original complaint the courts can order >you to remain here.
Stevie the BoN is not a court of law and court of law must have some reason to issue an order

I am not required to stay in tennesesse for years just because you file a civil action

any criminal filing can only be considered after the BoN has issed its findings. then a DA must decide that any action I took rises to a level that is criminal, and then he would get a warrant for my arest

you have provoked this response by years of abusive behavoir

you clearly do not understand the issues you are dealing with .

Speaking of paradoxes, the code test for extra people allow the "lesser classes" to be free of federal code testing for a license. They are the classic mugwumps sitting astride the code-test-fence, one foot on each side.

So, which way to count them? :-)

We can all go to AH0A.ORG and use Speroni's "unbiased" (Ha!)
lumping of the code-test-only-for-extras comments as being Absolutely FOR CW! [no red strike-outs on THOSE icons!]

Of course, Joe Speroni is an unabashed morseman since way back.
He also had a couple Petitions DENIED by the FCC. <shrug>

Jimmie say Speroni is MORE ACCURATE. He is a morseman, ergo, he is "accurate." <shrug> <wink, wink...> :-)

My analysis put the code-test-only-for-extras in a separate category, neither for nor against the NPRM. Readers will have to decide for themselves how to "rate" them.

What the Commission will actually DO in the future is up to them. Some poor guy/gal or small group there has got a whale of an analysis task to wade through nearly 3700 filings after 14 November 2005 and try to get a feeling of what the "public" wants. That's going to take quite a while, I'd say more than the 10+ months between 15 Jan 99 and late December 1999 on WT Docket 98-143 for Restructuring. 98-143 had no more than about 2200 filings between official start and end times of Comments/Replies.

FCC once said it wanted a "consensus" on opinions in amateur radio. It should be blatantly obvious that there is NO such "consensus" with regard to WT Docket 05-235 and NPRM 05-143.

Nitpickers can make all the "finger-pointing" they want about "illusionary four decimal place percentages" but the opinions filed so far have a damn close near-even split betweeen For and Against.

Whichever way the final R&O goes, we've all seen a part of history in the making in regards to U.S. amateur radio. Democracy in action, visible on the FCC ECFS! Good thing!

I'm not sure why this thread is even being cross-posted into a CB group, but to answer your question, in the US, the radio must be serviced by a qualified, licensed individual. That is the "legal" way of doing it anyway.
It doesn't happen very often, but that is another story for another time...

Logically true. :-)

RCA sub-division Commercial Aviation Electronics had a sales phrase "Primus inter Pares" (First Among Equals) in '74. :-)

Weird sort of paradox in Latin, no less! RCA overgovernment told them to stop its use after some months. Too many potential customers knew Latin and remarked on it...without buying enough equipment. :-)

Neat, almost self-defining paradox thing: First Among Equals!

Alun, my posting to my severest critic (Jimmie) did not involve your residency. However, it might be worth it to point out a few things about Internet access and basic U.S. law.

While the government of the United States is now heavily connected to the Internet and, if an agency makes input to them public via that same Internet, it does NOT mean that the Constitution of United States has been "changed" or overthrown...so that "all" can "decide" on U.S. law.

The FCC "permits" non-resident input to the ECFS only because it has not installed an elaborate system of locking out those who are foreign residents (by the address blocks required to enter an electronic comment) or those who are foreign nationals.
Since U.S. citizens living abroad have an easy and convenient communications avenue through the Internet, it is advantageous to NOT have such a lock-out sub-program for them.

Mention of a foreign citizen having a "RECIPROCAL" U.S. amateur radio license does NOT mean those who have it are somehow "U.S. citizens" elligible for all the rights of the U.S. Constitution guaranteed to citizens. That is NOT in the Communications Act of 1934 nor the Telecommunications Act of 1996 nor the Radio Regulations of the ITU-R. Those two Acts were created as Legislation by the Congress of the United States (which itself was created by the U.S. Constitution).

That everyone with access to the FCC ECFS can SEE each filing there does not mean the FCC will CONSIDER each one as representing "the public" (meaning the citizens of the United States). As is understood, the FCC need only LEGALLY CONSIDER those filings which were done in the legally-posted notice in the Federal Register...which did not happen until 31 August 2005 despite the first non-government filing on WT Docket 05-235 occuring on 20 July 2005. By observation and count, OVER HALF of the filings on that Docket (so far, official end of Replies to Comments is 14 November, Comment period was officially up on 31 October) were done BEFORE they were legally open and official! [did Joe Speroni bother with that "detail"?]

Comment of any kind to the FCC is OPEN to anyone because our mail and communications avenues are quite open to all. BUT, the FCC is obliged - by law - to consider "the public" in DETERMINING civil radio regulations' DECISIONS. What "the public" is to the FCC is a legal nicety handled better by those who are legal specialists. Phil Kane, an attorney specializing in communications law and former regular in here, might comment on that...or might not.

Would the United Kingdom hold U.S. citizens' comments about THEIR laws in the same regard as a UK citizen? Would they DECIDE new laws and regulations on the basis of such foreign input? I don't think so.

WT Docket 05-235 is NOT a "voting booth." There is NO VOTE on NPRM 05-143. We can communicate with the FCC openly (as long as they permit that) but, in the end, the DECISIONS on amateur radio regulations are THEIRS. That I happened to use percentages in my tally or that Joe Speroni later used percentages in his tally, is just a convenience is seeing who was for what. Whatever method the FCC actually uses to REACH a decision on making a Report and Order is up to THEM.

Don't get your legal briefs in a bind. California has a Special Election on Tuesday. Do you consider that legal residents NOT of California (population somewhere around 33 million) have "equal right" to VOTE - and thus DECIDE - on several issues in that election? I don't think so. The state of California doesn't think so.

For further legal questions on the admissability of written communications to the United States government, please consult with the self-styled lawmaster in here, James P. Miccolis. He "has all the answers." Oyez, oyez!

Get a new rule book like one that is newer than say about 10 or so years.
The CB radios in the US has not required a license to repair them in many years. The GROL is the replacement for the 1st and 2 nd class licenses that used to be required to repair many transmitters. For about 95 % of the transmitters in the US it is now worthless and not needed. Some companies may require it as they think they are getting someone that may know something. Now it is only needed for :

**********
General Radiotelephone Operator License (GROL) is required to adjust maintain, or internally repair FCC licensed radiotelephone transmitters in the aviation, maritime and international fixed public radio services. It conveys all of the operating authority of the MROP.

It is required to operate the following:

any maritime land radio station or compulsorily equipped ship radiotelephone station operating with more than 1500 watts of peak envelope power;

voluntarily equipped ship and aeronautical (including aircraft) stations with more than 1000 watts of peak envelope power

**********

Go here for more info on the licenses that are now issued.

Thanks for that. So the theory i get so far is anyone can build an Amateur radio but they cant "repair" a CB radio.... lol.. it is a crazy world

Why don't you report me to the FBI as well, hell, just report everyone on the group you usless twit. Go ahead, the FBI has much better things to do than to listen to a retarted half-wit.

Did he say which Mark Morgan was caught on tape? Did he give your address or a description indicating he was specificily talking about you? Do you think you are the only Mark Morgan in the world? Do you even think?

See comments above about license not needed any more for CB repair in the US.

It used to be the Amateur tests were about on par with the comercial class licenses. The main differance was just the regulatory rules and not the electrical part. That was about 1972 when I passed the 1 st class license. The way they are now anyone with a good memory can pass the tests. My wife passed the Technichan class about 1987 or 88 just by memorizing the Q&A pool. She doesn't know or care about the technical part of radio.

well I make a point of never saying never about such things but I agree it is very unlikely indeed he has to do or say something that in fact firghtens or disturbs me and that I don't feel I can handle

the mouses are going on about a threat made by posting someone else address and phone who shares my name but isn't along with a week worth of threats at me impling that poster palned to crucify me, given the existance ofdanger however slight to someone I felt I had the incident

"Your welcome" - Mongolloyd, "you're" one stupid fucking retard.
"Llouyds" - "Lloyd's" such a fucking DUMBASS, he can't even spell his own name correctly!
"stagnanat?" - Do you mean "stagnant" like what is between your fucking Dumbo ears, Mongolloyd?
"accomadations" - Do you mean "accommodations" which are quite unlike your flithy HUD apartment in the Athens, AL ghetto?
"oppurtunity" - Mongolloyd never misses an "opportunity" to be stupid.
"Stubbenville" - Mongolloyd couldn't find WV on the map much less "Stubenville, Ohio."
"copy & past" - Mongolloyd spams with his "copy & paste" of every fucking idiotic thing he sees!
"appretince" - Mongolloyd makes good spell for a quarter-wit "apprentice".
"glorius" - Mongolloyd make "glorious" FUCK UP!
"weekened" - Mongolloyd's "weekend" consists of getting drunk and whining about another man! That is, between delivering pizzas.
"Woger mkae" - "Roger make"s Mongolloyd look like a fool, time and time again!

"noddle" - Lardass your little "noodle" of a dick is like a fucking shard of thin spaghetti!
"usae" - Mongolloyd never "use"s any fucking sense or correct spelling.
"I ambored" - Mongolloyd, you are an idiot as well!

Mongolloyd make good spells!

This shows how little you know about the current version of part 97.
Reciprocal licences (Form 610-A) are no longer issued. Anyone from a country with a reciprocal agreement simply operates in the US under their foreign licence, with an appropriate prefix. Also, anyone except a representative of a foreign government can obtain a regular US licence by taking the same tests as anyone else.

If someone entered a comment using their UK call it would likely not even cross the minds of the Ofcom staff whether they were a British citizen, which is the mirror image of the situation here.

The point is not whether comments by aliens have to be considered by the FCC as a matter of law. Doubtless you are right in pointing out that they don't. However, my impression is that the FCC neither knows nor cares about the citizenship of those who post comments. If you think they should, and there is certainly a case for that, then you should tell them, instead of skewing your interpretation of the comments.

It would be interesting to group the comments as follows:-

1) US citizens who hold a ham licence and reside in the US
2) US citizens who aren't hams and reside in the US
3) Aliens who have an FCC ham licence and reside in the US
3) US citizens who are hams but live outside the US
4) Aliens who have an FCC ham licence and live overseas
5) None of the above

However, the FCC has no capability to divide up the responses except by whether or not they have an FCC licence, which arguably they shouldn't even do, as responses from non-hams like you ought to be considered. I suspect most comments fall in group (1), but these are not the only ones that will be considered.

Of course.

But there's as much reason to use ADA against the Extra written as their is to use it against an "Extras only" code test.

Which is up to interpretation. "Access" can be interpreted to mean being allowed to take the test, not being guaranteed a license.

Read it again! I wrote there are no additional operating (meaning on-the-air) privs except a bit more spectrum.

Let me try another way...

What does upgrading to Extra get for a General class licensee?

There's the ability to VE all exams including Extra.

There's the really spiffy callsigns.

But Generals have access to all the same bands as Extras. All the same modes, too, and the same power level.

On 4 of the HF bands, there are parts of the band that are for Extras only.

The ADA argument could be brought that all that additional theory in
the Extra written isn't an absolute requirement because it's not directly related to the privileges gained.

I think it does. Paved paths could be provided, and small motor vehicles.

Point is, that's not done because, in those parts of the national parks, access by everyone is deemed secondary to preserving the wild state of the park.

I'm wondering how the options given above would not meet ADA. The

What would be the problem?

I don't think FCC cares one way or the other.

Not only that, but there's probably no real system of checking that commenters are who they way they are. Of course there are probably laws on the books for deliberate false statements but I don't think FCC has gone after any amateur radio commenters with them...

I think the content of the comments is more important than whether
the commenter is a citizen.

It's one point of many I'm making about the (in)accuracy of Len's 'scorecard'.

Let's look at the facts:

1) The NPRM proposes complete elimination of all Morse Code testing for an FCC-issued amateur radio license.

2) Only 45% of those submitting comments support complete elimination of all Morse Code testing for an FCC-issued amateur radio license. That's a clear minority.

3) A clear majority (well over 60%) of those submitting comments support elimination of Morse Code testing for a General-class FCC-issued amateur radio license.

4) A clear minority (well under 40%) of those submitting comments support no change in Morse Code testing for an FCC-issued amateur radio license.

5) The comments are not a vote. FCC accepts comments from all interested parties, including multiple comments from the same person.
But one person's opionion isn't worth more because of multiple filings.

What's wrong with that?

It's not an either-or issue

Because they submitted comments.

His tabulation is unbiased compared to yours.

They are against the NPRM, which calls for complete elimination of all code testing.

Ad hominem attack noted.

In order to have a petition denied, a petition must be filed.

Has Leonard Anderson filed any petitions with FCC?

Let's put that to a "vote"...

Should multiple comments and reply comments which express the same opinion from the same person be counted separately?

Or should they be counted as one opinion?

> My analysis put the code-test-only-for-extras in a separate

That can easily be done with the AH0A analysis.

You also counted multiple filings by the same person as separate opinions even if they say essentially the same thing.

If a person writes a lot of reply comments, does that mean their opinion is worth more than the person who simply wrote a comment? Your tally says it does.

> What the Commission will actually DO in the future is up to

And it's not a vote.

What the public wants is only one factor in the decision. FCC rules are not democratic nor a referendum. They're more like a benevolent dictatorship - the governed can ask but there's no absolute mandate. Those who make the rules are appointed, not elected, too.

> That's going to take quite a while, I'd say

Is that an entry for The Pool?

The FCC is mandated to do what they think is best. Doesn't mean they always live up to the mandate.

Nor was there a consensus on 98-143 but FCC acted anyway.

Not true, unless you consider multiple filings of the same opinion
by the same person as being worth more.

If A files a comment supporting one position, and B files a comment and 9 reply comments supporting a different position, should B's opinion be worth 10 times what A's opinion is worth, simply because B is more adept at spamming ECFS?
is B's opinion

> Whichever way the final R&O goes, we've all seen a part of

The history of amateur radio is made every day.

> Democracy in action, visible on the FCC ECFS! Good thing!

It's a good thing but it's not "democracy". ECFS is not a vote, and there is no requirement for FCC to follow the commentary, with or without percentages.

For example, after comments closed back in 1999, the majority thought that FCC should retain at least two code test speeds. This was clearly documented by KC8EPO and reported by WK3C (as WA6VSE). "Democracy in action" would require that FCC follow that majority opinion.

But FCC reduced code testing to one speed, the absolute minimum they considered adequate for treaty compliance.

Now the majority that think FCC should retain a code test for Extra. "Democracy in action" would require that FCC follow that majority opinion.

We'll see if they do...

Comments aren't votes. Filings on ECFS do not decide FCC regulations.

FCC seeks the comments of all interested parties.

Citizenship is not a requirement.
Residency is not a requirement.
Licensure is not a requirement.

Alun's comments are as welcome to FCC as those of any citizen.

In fact one of the most-cited-for-support comments to the Restructuring R&O were those of Kenwood - a Japan-based manufacturer of radio equipment. So FCC
does consider all comments regardless of who makes them.

Alun doesn't have a reciprocal license. He has an FCC-issued US amateur radio license. He passed all the tests required for that license at the time it was issued - no freebies or byes because of his UK license.

Different subject entirely.

Do you really think FCC will disregard all comments filed before August 31 because they were early?

FCC could easily put something on ECFS saying "noncitizens should not comment" or "US citizens only". Other govt. websites do similar stuff when citizenship is an issue.

That "public" includes noncitizens.

You seem to think that "the public" doesn't include Alun even though he's lived in the USA for years and holds a valid FCC amateur radio license.

By excluding the comments of noncitizens, you're saying you have no regard for their opinions.

That's right. So the citizenship stuff doesn't apply.

So why did you bother to do a scorecard at all, Len?

I think you expected a different outcome and are now chagrined that your opinions aren't shared as much as you expected.

ECFS isn't an election, Len.

And the fact is that nonresidents have a lot of control over what happens to California laws. Federal law can preempt state law even if the residents of a state are against the federal law.

Regardless of ECFS, FCC will do whatever they do. Most indications are that they will just delete Element 1 and make no other changes to Part 97 at this time, regardless of 'consensus' or 'majority' or 'scorecards'.

If that happens, the only way for noncodetested Technicians to get HF privileges will be for them to upgrade to General or Extra.

I I think the ADA may predate waivers...
but that isn't of any importance anyway.

The ADA didn't force anyone to immediately do anything. Most or much of the ADA impact has been with new accomodations.
Application of ADA in existing situations has usually been the reult of a complaint by an individual or a group of individuals.

Forget all the "my survey of comments analysis" is more accurate than yours... Consider the following question/challenge:

In all of the procode test arguments and comments has even one NEW reason to retain code testiing been offered?

Forget even if such an argument is valid or compelling in any way...I'm looking for any argument
not previously raised and dismissed by or in past FCC commentary (NPRMs, R&Os, etc.)

My short answer (and I'll be the first to say I haven't read all comments) is that there are no
new arguments raised... because if there had been we'd have seen it or them by now.

Cheers,

No...it's on USENET.

Of COURSE they get to! From the Board, to Me, to them. Then eventually back to you.

Uh huh....

"feeling" "guilty"

Nope. That's an acceptable adjective used to describe what a person does when they can't get their way, and then try to inflict some sort of "damage" by this action.

> my complaint will document my real concern that you have violated the > rules of the tennesse BoN cchapter 1000-2 rules and reg of lpn's

None of which applies to our USENET exchanges.

STILL a "case" for me.

It's not going to take a rocket scientist to figure out your "motives", Markie. Stevie Wonder can see that!

>(UNSNIP)...OTOH if I am right and send

Not happening.

Not "find" an attorney, Markie...FOUND.

> If you get something that the court will try to serve me with that

> court but I may be worng) ....(SNIP)

No, that service will take place HERE if you intend to press these "charges".

And of course you're wrong.

> (UNSNIP)...then I first make a pro se effort to have

It won't be dismissed, Markie.

Attempting a malicious retaliatory claim of misconduct in a State board is a felony.

> If I have to blow the money on a retainer...(SNIP)

Well, well, Markie...We've caught you in another tale...

You've already tired the "I have a lawyer" routine. You also tried the "I have so much money and property" routine that you could outspend me on legal expenses.

> (UNSNIP)...then I will also take a shot

"harrassment" "expensive"

Markie, EVERYTHING is "hate speech" to you. Even when people do their best to clearly help or accomodate you, you insult them, call them names and otherwise create hate and distrust (ie: your rantings with Hans when he answered your 60m band quartions)

"rediculous"

At this point, the conversation allegedly changes from "Markie" to "Mrs Markie"...Of course since the "introduction" starts of with the same lack of ability to spell, I seriously doubt the validity...but I'll play along!

> Let me introduce myself - I

Oh geeze...Here we go...

> First of all you are confusing the > processes and methods of criminal legal cases with those of civil.

No, I'm not. Your S/O is going to try and "harm" me by making complaints to the Tennessee State Board of Nursing for these USENET exchanges.

When he's done doing that and once the malicious intent has been established, I am going to ask that appropriate criminal chages for the criminal mischief be filed, and I will seek CIVIL damages as well.

> You need to go clarify that before you make any more stupid comments.

You better turn to the other half there when addressing "stupid comments".

BTW...His actions will affect YOUR standard of living.

Sure they will be against Mark.

Sweetums, you need to get that slob to show you his REAL track record going back almost a decade on USENET silliness and stupidity.

IF, and I repeat IF he's really stupid enough (or you are stupid enough to let him) to file these "complaints", I WILL demonstrate his malicious intent.

Regardless of what he thinks of me in THIS forum, there will be a brigade of my professional peers in that hearing who will tear his story to shreds. And on top of that I can call in literally HUNDREDS of persons who have been my patients over the last decade who can attest to my professional character. Local businessmen, politicos, law enforcement and other persons KNOWN to the community.

So...If "the Colonel" thinks he can "make a case" from these USENET exchanges as opposed to the testimony of professionals, then have at it...

BTW...Just how far do you think his "complaint" will get with his repeated acknowledgement of his INTENTIONAL lying and deceit?

> 3rd, even if he is required to give a deposition in Deposition, Yes...Testimony, get your bags packed.

Pretty poor grammatical expression for an alleged "paralegal"

But in any case, if Markie intends to use the TENNESSEE State Board of Nursing to inflict his will on me, he'll eventually have to come here.

There's no errors. You'll push this button and eventually have the hammer fall on your own head, Markie.

I've told the "turth" on more occassions than you'd care to admit to, Markie, but hey, that's OK...

I won't try unscramble the sentence...

of charges, Markie...

True. But it is still a legally binding hearing.

Do me a favor...File your "complaint". Then when the hearing is set, DON'T show up.

Nope. Just looking forward to laughing at you in person for a change.

Nope.

There's not a single thing in this USENET forum that is potentially punishable by ANY act of censure, suspension or revocation of my Nursing license.

YOU are certain there is, despite the fact that your own "buddies" won't publically support you and that not one other person offers you any encouragement...But then you are known (and yes, "Google provides") for your deceit, dishonesty and intentional misrepresentation of material fact.

In short, what ever inconvienience you may cause in the short term,
I am going to use to rip you "a new one" in the long term...

> you have provoked this response by years of abusive behavoir

The abuse is yours, Markie...Lies, deceit, harrassment...

GOT real LEGAL advice, and she says you're in for the ride of your life if you think otherwise.

Get your attributions straight. That post was by someone from Glendale

That's rich, from a fatass who can't even find the right ARES website, not to mention the fucking imbecile who thinks one "operates" a dictionary instead of reading one.

"FUCKUP Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> geography idiot and imbecile
fucks up
as usual when he thinks Marshall County, Alabama
and Marshall County, West Virginia are the same place in message <afvsc2$6aa$1@pita.alt.net>:
" Then what is at http://www.geocities.com/skywarncanwarn/ doodle brain?
It sure looks like the Marshall County ARES, and it even has a place to send email."

Saggytits Lee steps on his own tiny dick when he tried to correct
somebody else's English use first by saying one "operates" a dictionary
instead of reading it, then uses "things" instead of "thinks" in <jewish.reggae.rocks@houston-hunks.com>:

"Translation: Woger can't figure out how to operate a dictionary, let alone correct someone else's language.But that's not surprising from someone who things that..."

Saggytits Lee manages to fumble again when he tried to backpedal on his improper use of words by once again mangling the sentence in reply <gweasy.long.hair@houston-hunks.com>:
"The word "operate" can be a synonym "use" in certain contexts"

Except you posted the original post, fatass, and it wasn't from

Nope. Just common sense.

You're the one "fudging", Len. By counting multiple comments and reply comments from the same person as separate opinions rather than duplicates, you're saying that some people's opinions are worth more than others simply because they wrote more.

What's worse is that you tried to hide that fact, and the effect it has on the 'scorecard'.

> By the way, I don't know if the FCC uses "percentages" or not.

You muddied that clarity by counting some people's opinions multiple times.

Not at all.

And then the trend went the other way. Like it or not.

It was easy for me. Just googled "05-235 stats" and it came right up.

You don't have website, though, even though AOL has a homepage for every screen name.

But not all of it. I saw your anti-Extra diatribe. Some would say it

So are the written tests. If FCC enacts the NPRM, it will take at least a General license for new hams to get any HF privileges.

Sure - as part of a battalion of military servicepeople caring for a bunch of transmitters. You were trained to do the job, tested along the way, and supervised at every opportunity.

The transmitter operation was completely governed by set procedures and by experienced personnel.

Amateur radio is a completely different thing. FCC recognizes that, even if you don't.

Because hams use Morse Code, for one.

Nope. I think for myself. I've given my reasons for my support of Morse Code testing in my comments to FCC, and here.

You don't like them, so you attack me and claim nonsense like "conditioned thinking" rather than a simple difference of opinion.

Why not?

You go into detail explaining other people's motivations, so yours are fair game even if you won't discuss them or admit to them.

No, you didn't write that. Read what you actually wrote, Len.

Here's an example:

"Len's scorecard counts not only comments but all filings on the NPRM.
If
the same person submits multiple filings, they are counted as duplicates
only if they are exactly identical. Multiple nonidentical filings are counted
the same as if they were filed by different people, thereby skewing the count towards support for Len's opinion."

Now that's clear. Also true.

I'm not calling people names, Len. You are.

That leaves you out...

Not as closed as yours, Len.

Percentages, Len. Percentages in support of the various options.

It's clear you tried to skew them the way you want them, Len. But the majority still opposed it.

Oh, I have objections, alright, however you DO have your legal right to file whatever "complaint" you feel you want to do so long as it's not filed maliciously.

However there are consequences for complaints filed maliciously.

Your lengthy pontifications in this NG to do just that establishes that malicious intent, Markie. So have at it...Makes things easier for me in the long run.

I have other posts of yours archived on CD with your alleged knowledge of what constitutes proper prescribing authority.
Ironically, it was a post wherein you made a similar comment and I questioned YOUR "medical" credentials.

So...be my guest...It's a CD-RW, so it's easy to add.

And thanks....

So what's your theory? Do you think that, if you change the text of your posts in your followups, no one is smart enough to read the original post? I BELIEVE THAT YOU DO! It's the only possible explanation. All that time in the Shipwreck Lounge has caused you to addle your brain with alchohol. You should switch back to pot.

Nope.

N2EY and I have taken each other to task on a number of subjects.
I disagree with Dee. I disagree with Kim. I've "shared words" with Larry Roll in the past.

WHERE was the "defiling", Mark?

I stated his (Dick Carrol's) old call was coming available.

You have YET to prove any "defiling".

Nope.

Let's see:

Markie lied about his Army rank.

Markie lied about his branch of service.

Markie continues to lie about "threats" allegedly made against him and his family.

Markie states that it's not only "OK", but he INTENDS to teach any future offspring HOW to LIE.

Markie lied about his mental health therapy.

And those are just the funniest ones...

Markie has no business alledging others have honesty and "basic morality" issues.

There was no "admission" of ANY kind, Markie.

How am I "responible" (RESPONSIBLE) for Brain's not taking a publivally offered wager? Afterall, HE has even admitted he didn't acknowledge it or accept it. Your "argument" is with him.

it is telling choice of words

OTOH your "logic" implies a rape vitum may not report the rape becuase
the vicutm dislikes the accuesed

you need a lawyer

that will be the issue

have you READ the passges in question lately

I have and saw provisoin that were in NO way limited to a hospital or professional setting

You medical statements are IMO unethical

You statements about classes of people would lead a reasonable person to question wether you are able to carry out your medical duties without discrimination and If it is found our internet exchance are not covered by the BoN ability to act then you have no case against me since you will not be damaged by my action

talk to a lawyer

nope

go see a lawyer

my motives are ilrelavant Stevie

your action and wether or not they lie withing the BoN power to act

your have to show you were damaged by my actions

talk to a lawyer

then if he told I have to travel to tennesessee for your civil action then he is either lying to you or more likely you have not explained the case to him properly since it is plain you don't understand what is going here

no charges would ever be pressed by me but BoN if they deem fit to do so. I will present them with information about your activies and the USE the claimed PORFESSIONAL use you put that license to in any event If I testfiy in TN at the BoN and return home you will still have to prefom the service here, by the means provided for by law

You seem to be under the delusion that he BoN matter is Mark v Stevie, it would the BoN v Steve

I do if need to

but I do not currently have un retainer a lawyer who is a meber of the State bar in TN nor is the my lawyer for federal matter realy quailified in civil tort at the federal level

more threats

more effort to imtiadate a witness that is a charagbel offense in even the event your corect and that BoN lacks jurisstician over the conduct I am bringing to it attention

indeed your threats on this matter may well be a crime which one reason I am slowing down my preeration to include your efforts

and your efforts in this regard add to my conviction that even you think the BoN will act aginst you in some way proving Malice is far than proving I dislike you, for that Mater I public declare I do dislike like you so they no way of saying I am trying to conseal this fact

Indeed I may well refer to my dislike in my cover leter /analys of your wiritng to BoN (not sure yet since I have not writen that document

BTW FYI what will be send afterI am finsih sorting through will about 50 to hunerd of YOUR posts complete and entire post with the section I feel relavant highlighted and cover leter and analyis of each of those posts and how I feel they macth the provision of the TN BoN regs you can try such a defense it may even work for you but I doubt it. If the BoN decides to take the matter up for some kind of action then they will be looking at your use and IMO ABUSE of your LPN status to make PROFESSIONAL judgement on USENET

Depotions can be done anywhere Stevie I can be deposed here and indeed as I live here I will insist on it you and or your consel depnding on how the BoN procedcures work can be present by phone or other means it is by no means certain that I must travel ever

The cops and or the DA are always involeved in filing criminal charges

you will first have to make a police report. oolice report are made to the police. the police are the Cops

therefore if your are going to get charges filed that can result in anyones arrest that cops will be involed, indeed without the cops who is going to arrest me?

in a criminal case yes but the the BoN is NOT a crimanl proceeding. I truely wish it were and that the result could be you ending up behind bars, but that isn't the case.

it is not even a civil involving me as a plaintiff

i am merely an informant providing a service to the BoN another lie I am not certain there is. I believe there is you can't seem to tell the truth about much of anything regard ing me what power do you claim to be anble to read my mind and know I am certain that you can be santioned for your PROFESSIONAL asertions on USENET.

I am certain enough that I take my intended action with relitively little risk to myself.

and I am certain that I don't think you are fit to be a nurse, esp to any person who may be homosexual or bixeaul or follow an alternitive religion, people you are required to serve without discrimination. You may indeed serve them, but your coment lead me and I believe will the BoN to question that state of affairs. Assuming your questioned and found not wanting you will not have been damged LEGALY, maybe your in your pride but that is long way from criminal charges

If merely damaging a persons pride were criminal you would indeed be in jail by now. of that I have no doubt

>.. despite the fact that your own "buddies"

I don't need nor did i request the "support" of anyone. I asked if folks would throw me a keyword or 2 Brain has thrown a keyword that I have useful

comited or Todd father having AIDS

more threats

Indeed it looks like you are trying to delay my coment by the way you keep adding to the file about your effort at witness intimadation,

An interesting tactic I must say

That was Lardass posting that. My trailer is much better and he didn't even mention my favorite shemale, Lurlene, from over at the Right now I'm worried about a paternity suit from Lurlene, so I gotta

"Sir Markie of Paganopolis" just an example of Stevie language If you knew Stevie LPN was making such a statement, and you were a pagan (or a muslim for that matter) would you trust him with your life?

I would not esp when it isn't just the one statement

Stevie you need to realize you are currently a NURSE and a PROFESSIONAL and a licensed one at that ,a nd therefore you need to be doing better and claener than alot of folks

On November 1, 2005 the Office of Management and Budget issued a Notice of Action approving the revised Federal Communications Commission Form 475, General Consumer Complaint Form and new Federal Communications Commission Form 475B, Obscene, Profane, and/or Indecent Material Complaint Form.

The new FCC Form 475B will enable the Commission to collect detailed data from consumers on the practices of those persons/entities that may post obscene, profane, and/or indecent material by giving consumers an opportunity, for the first time, to use a specific form to file their complaints. Form 475B will be used only for complaints associated with obscene, profane, and/or indecent material.

Both Form 475 and Form 475B will significantly improve the informal complaint process for consumers, industry, and Commission staff by minimizing confusion on what information the Commission requires. Use of these forms also will improve the complaint process and the overall quality of the complaints received.

More information about filing a complaint with the FCC can be found at http://www.fcc.gov/cgb/complaints.html

I certainly agree Mr Slit has nothing better to do with life

Mr Slit may be Stevie I also hear he is Roger wiseman (which I currently believe) or LLyod Davies (which I don't believe at all)

if you have the skill/knowledge to trace Mr Slit and show he Stevie or just is likely to be Stevie and would like to help me out then send me some evidence (quickly if you can) by email to the Konstans address. I 'll my best to make real use of it (that best may be lacking but Stevie

Roger doesn't live in a trailer, dumbass. Looks like Lloydie the Tool Fellator Davies fucks up again!

TOOL FELLATOR
Vocal by Sade
Words and Music: Sade Adu and St. John and Lloyd's Owner

He whining like another girl
And smelling his own farts.
Placing stupid posts, mistake after mistake.
He's hated on seven continents.
Dalek dolls and stained underpants, high on pussy bud lite.
Heaven help him, when he falls.

He has no life, sad pizza boy.
He sucks them off with minimum waste and maximum joy.
Athens City lights and Llloyd'll suck you right.
When you require sexual desire for homosexual nights.

No place for beginners or sensitive hearts
When Lloyd blows you nothing is left to chance.
No place to be ending but somewhere to start.

No need to ask.
He's a tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator.

Coast to coast, LA to Chicago, Lloyd'll suck any male.
Across the north and south, to Key Largo, Lloyd the cocksucking whale.

Face the facts, Lloyd's a mental case.
He shadow boxes and double posts,
Yet needs the asskickings.

No license to love, no girlfriend to hold.
Makes sniveling whines and is certainly owned.
His eyes are like a pig's but his stupidity is shown.

No need to ask.
He's a tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator.

Coast to coast, LA to Chicago, Lloyd'll suck any male.
Across the north and south, to Key Largo, Lloyd's love for sale.

tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator,
tool fellator...

<restore of what Saggytits waddled away from>

"FUCKUP Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> geography idiot and imbecile
fucks up
as usual when he thinks Marshall County, Alabama
and Marshall County, West Virginia are the same place in message

" Then what is at http://www.geocities.com/skywarncanwarn/ doodle
brain?
It sure looks like the Marshall County ARES, and it even has a place to

Saggytits Lee steps on his own tiny dick when he tried to correct
somebody else's English use first by saying one "operates" a dictionary
instead of reading it, then uses "things" instead of "thinks" in <jewish.reggae.rocks@houston-hunks.com>:

"Translation: Woger can't figure out how to operate a dictionary, let

Saggytits Lee manages to fumble again when he tried to backpedal on his improper use of words by once again mangling the sentence in reply <gweasy.long.hair@houston-hunks.com>:
"The word "operate" can be a synonym "use" in certain contexts"

I would guess a fair amount dont really care about the technical side or would want to build their own radio and linear. You would have to be pretty dedicated for that. I would also guess at most Amateurs are happy just talking legally with a licence and a stock bought radio and antenna. Not that theres anything wrong with that, it just depends on how serious you take the hobby. Like the M3 foundation licence. It suits a lot of people who are.. disillusioned with CB and want to go Amateur but not really wishing to get so involved with the whole technical side of things. There are some good M3 people out there whatever the old school say, but i agree they will never be on a par with a full licence holder but is that such a terrible thing.

You are in full denial. My good friend John is from Glendale, and he sees Roger go into the Shipwreck all the time. It's on a dead end

And Markie, from a guy who claims to have a 248 IQ, a Bachelor's

you are the one that can't do so Stevie

you have BY YOUR OWN account taken action in an effort to have me
commited or confined in mental health facility based on what I say here

Then you turn around and claim you can carry out your efforts suing your LPN license to do so without being bound by the regs of the TN BoN

I don't have any problem with the ones that just want to talk. There are many good hams in public service providing communications for emergencies. I know one ham that got his license many years ago so he could fly his radio controled airplane and use 6 meters where there were few others using that frequency.

I do wish that the test could be hands on for a few simple things such as installing a coax connector and and using a simple SWR meter. Also it should be required to have a ARRL handbook or equivilent in the shack. Would not even have to be a new one, but one 10 years old would be ok. Not that many would really read it but it could answer some simple questions.

now you claim to know what the FCC will enact?

personaly I hope that they will heed my word and Jim Haneys ( sp?an ARRL officer) and enact a R&O that gives the intail class currently called Tech the prevelegdes of the class once known as Tech plus

You are in full denial. My good friend John is from Glendale, and he sees Roger go into the Shipwreck all the time. It's on a dead end street, so he knows when people come and go. He even knows about the time you got shut off by the bartender for being a little too drunk.

Learn about the 12 steps before its too late.

Your drinking cost you a marriage, Woger. It also resulted in more than a few visits from the police and, ultimately, a court ordered therapy course.
Of COURSE you no longer drink. You can't, and it is because of the anti-depressant medications you must take. We understand that, Wogie.
We'll say a prayer for ya'.

"their"

Steve, when I put forth my opinion that you were nuts, you jumped up and down asking where my medical degree came from, screaming and crying like a little baby that I had made a medical diagnosis.

But here you are clearly prescribing a medication by name to a person by name, and following it up with the statement that it's your professional opinion. When you step outside your medical authority and prescribe medication to someone that you've never met or examined, you jump up and down and scream and cry that you >aren't< making a medical diagnosis.

You're such a two-faced little skunk. Best of Luck with the board.

Then you do demand that 911 operators and responders hold an FCC GROL with Morse Code endorsements?

Or do you only demand it of amateur radio volunteers?

Ouch! You should have kill-filed me as well because I cannot

he will need more than luck

BTW Brain been looking (google has not yet provided) has Stevie claimed that he HAS made a call or letter to medical authority claiming you should be commited has talked around the issue I find lots of that My question do you have a keyword that says H he has taken the action of contacting your home state and gerating a medical record. there seems to be clear reference in BoN regs to making a false report or report based on inaccurate por unetihcal procedure?

What's really neat mark, is I was no where near a computer the time it was sent out, I was in a lecture at school with 20 other people and the professor. I was no where near a computer at that time.

You have to do what is best for you but if she isn't a shemale she could put conditions on everything the way that women do. Before you got back home for lunch the next day, she may have made you sign your soul away just for a little goombah. I learnt long ago to date shemales because they are mostly guileless. Not Lurlene, though. She is telling me that she is pregnant and that she will go to Chief Norman Stenger of the Glendale Police Department if I don't marry her. But I know she is lying. culaterhulin.

Is Jim a deceitful coward? Is Dee a liar?

If not, then you've taken no-one "to task."

Saying that you do is deceitful and proves you to be a liar.

Considering how long you've held onto your Johnson, I'd "Attached"? In what way?

I don't have a conjoined twin, if that's what you mean.

All existing amateurs could be affected.

As I have explained before:

It has been possible to get an amateur radio license in the USA without any code test since 1991. It's been possible to get any available class of amateur radio license in the USA with only a 5 wpm code test since 1990.

But you haven't gotten one. And except for you "Extra out of the box" claim back in 2000, you haven't said you intended to.

Actually not. It's also an R&O, and has lots of policy statements from FCC.

For example, it specifically denies all requests for a new entry-class license. It also repeats FCC's support for a three-tier system of

license
classes. Plus much more.

Let's look at that last sentence again:

"Excellent in large urban areas before the offshore products appeared about four years later and the trucking industry started buying them."

That's not what was meant by "before the offshore products appeared about four years later and the trucking industry started buying them."

That refers to cb radios, and how the cb radio service wasn't so excellent anymore.

You know that the cb service went downhill. The same thing could happen to the amateur radio service. You're avoiding the issue because you know I'm right - or maybe because that sort of slide is exactly what you want.

Your sense of technical humor has gone missing, Len - if it ever existed.

The last time you sent me an "image", (unrequested and unwanted spam)
it contained male nudity. No thanks.

So you had a shorty connected to your compact Johnson. Quite appropriate....

It's true, nevertheless. You don't believe in a lot of things, but that doesn't change their truth.

I know what it's like to lose someone to cancer, yes. And to see someone die before their time.

I am sorry for your loss.

That's nice. But what does it have to do with amateur radio policy?

What is your problem, Len?

You can't take opposition to your cherished views, eh? You can't take strong debate.

You're misdirecting away from the point about cb.

Yes. Although I was never on cb, I did listen to it from time to time, and knew several active cbers back then. By the mid1960s the cb service was already a problem.

>You are describing LATER things than what happened here.

"Excellent in large urban areas before the offshore products appeared about four years later and the trucking industry started buying them."

Your words. Documenting the loss of excellence in the cb service.

You know it happened, but to admit it here would prove me right, and you can't tolerate that.

You don't have to use it. Point is, the cb service is such a mess that even you don't participate in it.

decade, but you comment on it at extreme length.

Amateur radio doesn't concern you either, but that doesn't stop you.

You can keep whatever you want, Len. But I find it odd that you would hold onto your tube-filled Johnson for so long. After all, you're always lecturing us about "change" and "new technology"

and all that sort of rot.

Where do you get that, Len?

K8MN did not write of "johnsons" at all. He wrote about "Johnsons".
(See the capital J?)

Many items are routinely referred to by the manufacturer's name.
Hams do it all the time when describing their rigs. For example, just considering radio sets, I've owned seven Heathkits, two RMEs, three Nationals, two Hallicrafters, one Gonset, seven Southgates
and yes, at least four different Johnsons.

> Does that turn you ON? Go talk with Davie about > "small johnsons!" :-)

Why? You've obviously got the most experience dealing with one of the smallest Johnsons ever produced.

Dave and I are more interested in the bigger Johnsons, such as the Valiant (I had one) and the Viking 2 (I had two of those, plus the 122 VFO).

So what I'm concerned with could happen. You won't admit that,
of course.

Nothing you or me say is going to sway the nurses board.

Steve will have to dissemble his own entrenching tool an bury his own sorry ass (like that Marine has ever used an entrenching tool). God knows he stinks and need burying. God give him the strength.

Jim and Mike say there is no God, so we might have to suffer Tennessee Nurse: Steven J Robeson, LPN's stench for a long time to come. Like that donkey in Mogadishu.

you know what I don't think anything you or I will say will do it either, what I think will do it is Stevie own words pointed out to the BoN indeed all I will be doing is forwarding a set of posts looks like about 70 will make the cut to the BoN (not his bosses but the people that license him)

I agree nothing I do with BoN will stop him from spreading his shit all around here

prehaps he will have to do so without the intials LPN though

If my doctor posts to r.r.a.p. and advises me to take blood pressure medicine, he isn't prescribing medication. If my doctor shows up here and demands that I take blook pressure medicine, he isn't prescribing medicine. If my doc hands me a signed prescription for blood pressure medication or telephones a prescription to my pharmacy, he has prescribed medicine.

You need to get a grip on reality.

My diagnosis is that Mark is an irrational twit. I prescribe remedial reading at a Special Education facility and a thirty-week, intensive Morse Code training session for Colonel Morgan.

why does that only to Stevie on your doctor

according to Stevie if I or Brain advise that someone needs meds Stevie charges in and says we are presribing and doing all sorts of nefarious deeds

but you don't have license for that Stevie claims he does and that he can do a a patient assement over the internet (his words,google provide) that he can make assement and cause dangerous stuff to be written in our files that will haunt us forever (or words that effect) all based on our posts in USENET and yet it is according to Stevie a FELONY to even report a concenr over wether he is bound to the rules published by the BoN about his activities

there is only one word for such a claim by Stevie and supported it seems by you

BULLSHIT is the word

Congrats! I had only a short time to listen to the action on 40m on Saturday evening. There were some really big West Coast signals in evidence.

W8RHM and I hit Washington County, PA hamfest early yesterday morning.

which is why I look into others ways of dealing with you Stevie has a license it can be revoked according the BoN for "lying in medcial matters"

you don't have such license so different standards apply (for that matter different stanrds apply to me too becuase of that)

In addition you have written to the State of Michigan siging the letter Dave Heil LPN where accoridng to Stveie he has written that state of Michigan signing it Steve Robeson LPN (or what ever he in fact signed)

Since you and He are claiming he can't parctice medicine or nursing over the USENET he must have made a false report to the State of Michigan, which is cause to have his license revoked or for him to suffer some kind of censure, according to state of TN BoN website

you seem to forget the care used by Phil(e) Kane I believe his name is in his posts being that he is an attonrney

nah you are both wrong the Aliens would never notice a signal was being sent esp by those old timers sending badly sent morse code ust to trip a code reader unit

after in Indenpendance Day they managed to send the CW under the aliens noses, that movie is still the best and most likely case I have yet

You're dumber than markie and toddie put together, and that's really dumb, 2test wogie. First you say I don't have a pilots license, then you make some half-witted claim that I must be K8RI, who according to his web site, certainly has a pilots license. I have nothing to come back and bite me. nothing at all.

you folks have dug and dug

you have found what?

That I am bisexual? agreed that I am kinky? agreed
That I will lie to protect my safety? agreed

Stevie Does it seems plain by his constans threat of elony charges and I know he claimed he wrote. I know someone wrote and that someone signed his name as LPN to the letter, becuase of the states shield laws that is all I can be told. I make the reasonable inference that Stevie wrote the letter.

and the BoN rep agreed that was the reasonable inference when I called Brian made the statement and you commented on it.

Brian Burke:

"But here you are clearly prescribing a medication by name to a person
by name, and following it up with the statement that it's your professional opinion. When you step outside your medical authority and prescribe medication to someone that you've never met or examined, you jump up and down and scream and cry that you >aren't< making a medical diagnosis."

You didn't correct Brian and tell him that Steve did not prescribe medicine, did you?

How does your imprecision with words become my splitting of hairs?

They might not? Do you really believe that? Your past fabrications regarding your military service and lies on numerous other topics, your ideas on sexual fun--you don't think those might lessen your credibility?

If you'll look to some of the material which appears above, you'll find at least two lies spouted by you. As to the accusations of bigotry on my part, deal with it. I view your sexual perversity as being immoral.
I've seen evidence of your frequent lying. You've shrouded yourself in victimhood and you want a free ride in life. You blame all of your numerous problems on others.

Now, see if you can have me fired.

no I did not

nor do I feel there is anything to correct

so why should try

I sated that I never used accused him of presribing, I happen to think a more proper choice is to say that he acted unethicalin medial matter which as happens is the words of the regs that Govern Stevie's LPN status
>

no imprecision with word occoured therefore of course that is not what became your spliting of hairs

indeed they might not

yes

what lies on other topics?

my lies conering my rank I can easily explain, and were obviously legal enough that dispite the fact Stevie claims to have reported the matter to the DoD no action was taken by 7 yars of silence from the DoD I can legaly assume the assent of the DoD and the FBI to that

I reported myself to the FBI all those years ago

> your > ideas on sexual fun--you don't think those might lessen your credibility?

the State of TN requires that I not recieve any discrimination based on my sexuality so yes I expect that Tennesse to obey its own rules

You did make a diagnosis.

And here YOU are clearly making a fool out of yourself by demonstrating your lack of understanding of what constitutes a "prescription".

You make this easier and easier, Brain(less).

Nope. But you've once again demonstraed that you've extended

And YOU still don't get it...the Board of Nursing WILL be talking to my employer. And when they conviene the hearing that they will be required to do, there will be a literal laundry list of witnesses who will testify that the "truth" is anything EXCEPT what you suggest.

And Markie...

I promise that not a single one of them will be former mental health patients who consider lying to be "OK" or an admirable trait.

The only way I'll "lose" that title, Markie, is when I transition

I said it's a felony to file a MALICIOUS report, which is what what witness will you call to support your claim that Todd's father has Aids

what witness will you call to suport your claim that I am documented pathological liar

what witness will you call to support your claim that I have AIDS

what witness will you to support your claim Len has OCD

or what witness will you call to show you did not make these claims

The Board cannot censure on an "inference", Markie...Only documented or properly attested to witnessed complaints of misconduct.

You can wench and whine about what I have to say in this forum all you want, but none of it manifests a violation of the BoN's rules and

Lying about being a Field Grade commissioned officer is NOT legal under ANY circumstances, save perhaps for obvious theatrical performances.

Your further compounding of your lie about that with your lie about "The FBI told me it was legal" makes the whole thing even more laughable as you re-tell it!

> by 7 yars of silence from the DoD I can legaly assume the assent of the

No, you cannot "legaly assume" anything of the sort.

And they ALSO get people "confessing" to be JFK's assassin, to have been abducted by aliens and hundreds of other crank and obviously mentally inadequate states of mind ever year.

No doubt you made the list.

That you would "call and confess" only made you look more idiotic!

Thanks!

Hot flash, Hot Rod...No prosecutable act of discrimination has occured.

You've not been "denied" a seconds worth of "free speech" here, nor have you been denied the vote, kept from health care (indeed I think you are more in need than most) nor have you been impeded from one inch's worth of unfettered travel or free movement.

Good luck proving "discrimination".

My Handbook (not ARRL) is much older, but I wasn't aware of any change in the physics in the interim. Why choose ten years? The Admiralty handbook is still relevant - and can answer questions - even if the units have changed. You appear to be a newcomer.

Sure there's an intent to cause harm.

I read that as an intent to cause harm.

Perhaps that's because you're cut from the same bolt of cloth, Markie.

You've publically stated that you find lying to be a "normal" and "moral" thing to do, ergo you WOULDN'T find "anything...offensive or remotely dishonest".

That YOU don't "find" them such doesn't mean they aren't.......

either...

Why?

Countless reports from Pearl Harbor stated that such bangings were heard from the hulls of various ships for days after the attacks. Some resulted in rescues...All too many just faded away.

agreed nor do I expect one to occour therefore I expect the State of TN to ignore my sexuality as I said to Dave

if the State treats me with less credibility becuase of My sexuality then a violation would occour but I don't expect that to happen

not at all

if Dave wishes me to get him fired all he needs to do is amke it clear that is what he wants give the means to contact his boss and I will get to work on it never promised to suceed but I will my attention

the same offer extend to you, if you WANT me to get you fired tell me

The question was directed at Jim. It was directed at Markie.

Yep.

Was that a question or a statement?

> Five Pillars Expert report to RRAP, thanks.

Sheesh, Brain. You and Markie are the ones making allusions that I have no sensitivities towards others based upon their religions...Yet all you can do is make fun of their religions...I at least have some fundamental understanding of the framework of those religions.

Wassup with that?

Nope.

Lennie IS a "putz". I've NEVER made any inference as to what religion he may be. I don't think I'd care to know.......

The word "putz" comes from Hebrew.

Hebrew is a language, not a religion.

True, it is the dominant language OF persons of Judism, however the language itself does not a Jew make any more than speaking Italian makes you a Roman Catholic or speaking with a Southern drawl makes you a Baptist.

> Mark a Homosexual Pagan.

Mark IS a homosexual Pagan. He's said so himself.

So where's the "lie", Brain...?!?!

obviously not Steve and you should look at that fact niether I nor Brain would knowingly consent to you having any part in our treatment in an ER or anywhere else

Len I suspect would agree although he has not rung in on this one

your attitude is so bad we don't trust you with pataint care

I would realy like to know where you work I'll promise not to call. I want to know becuase I would insist on being taken someplace else
becuase you worked there even at the risk of my life. I would never willing place it in your ho many of them used morse signal that was the claim tapping out morse never saw such a report if you want to show me a claim from the day that morse coded tapping was used form decent source I'll admit the calim but mere claims of tapping say nothing about morse code use in

That the DoD has better things to do than intervene in a USENET exchange is one thing.

People "break laws" every day without being cited or prosecuted for them...But that does NOT legitimize their infractions.

That they dismiss you as the nutcase you are does not lefitimize breaking the law. It just means you're probably THAT insignificant...

So now we have TWO statements in ONE 12 hour period wherein you acknowledge that no censurable act has occured.

Thanks. I'll file this one too.

> if the State treats me with less credibility becuase of My sexuality

We can wrap you in Saran Wrap, hide every religious icon, tatoo or other mark or symbol you may wear or bear, and it won't make a difference.

You've already admitted on occassions too numerous to catalog that you lie, do so liberally, and consider it to be a "right" and a morally just act.

That's all I need, Markie.

Three admissions of no violations or censurable acts.

Markie, there was no QUESTION posed there!

A "question" is an interrogative, grammatically stated with the use of a question mark at the end of it.

"Were you born a blithering idiot, or did you practice to get that way?"

That is a question.

"Mark Morgan is a blithering idiot and practices it daily"

That is a statement.

You need a nap, Markie. The typos are getting worse.

I didn't say it was "Morse Code", Markie. I said they were "bangings".

You quoted my exact words then try to say something quite different in the response.

Of course not.

Just as I have said before, Lennie and Brain are the ones who try to make some "religious" inference based upon some really fantastic stretching of the application of a root word.

another lie from Stevie

No threat at all

Dave has offered a contract if he accept the services he seem to be requesting I will accept the deal and carry out the contract nothing threating in offering to cary out his wishes for him (unless we

If I state an opinion on rrap that Steve is nuts, he jumps up and down, screaming and crying, demanding to know where I got my medical degree from to make such a "diagnosis."

Steve needs to get a grip on reality. In the meantime, Steve just gets what he dishes out.

Exactly - and nobody complained. It took get waivers, not advocacy by any US

But not different operating privileges!

(I should have said it that way from the beginning!)

IOW, what's the difference between operating on, say, 14,030 kHz vs. 14,020 kHz using the same mode and power level? What additional knowledge or skills are needed for the lower frequency that aren't needed
for the higher one?

It could be claimed that since the Extra written isn't required to use 14,030, why is it an absolute requirement to use 14,020? Particularly for folks who have a really tough time memorizing/understanding all the stuff in the written tests?

By allowing waivers in principle, the whole quagmire opens up to question all test requirements.

Just the opposite - because if they go there, and cite the precedent, what possible argument could be used against them?

This is actually backing up your assertion that FCC won't go for waivers under any circumstances, because they set the precedent for more waivers in cases like the above.

I don't know what Len's religion is or even if he belongs to any particular faith.

Steve has never explained why he uses the yiddish word "Putz" when perfectly good english word is available, such as "penis" or even slang
"dick."

OK, if you want to get technical, a "license" per-say is not needed, though they still need to be "certified as technically qualified to perform transmitter maintenance and repair duties in the private land mobile services and fixed services by an organization or committee representative of users in those services." - Reference FCC Part 95, Section 95.424 subsection "b".

And as the question that was asked, in relation to the US:
"Are CB's allowed to be repaired by the average CB'er who has the knowledge or are they only repairable by a qualified technician of some kind[?]"
The answer to the first part of the question is still NO, and the second part is still, YES. The "average CB'er who has the knowledge" can NOT service their own CB, legally. They would need to be "certified" to do so "by an organization or committee representative of users in [the CB service]."

What's a "Proety right"...?!?!

There's no such thing.

Every recent post in which you suggest that I "prescribed" medication.

And you substantiated that in the very post that you've now thrice quoted.

What "seems" to you is nothing more than your inappropriate interpretation of something you HOPE you can use against me.

The truth is something different.

Actually, DAYdreaming is more appropriate.

Again, you leave words out, disorganize others, and the meaning is lost.

Your assinine attempt to suggest my "take an Ativan" comment was an attempot to prescribe a medicine.

How can you tell?

Your English comprehension skills, in a word, suck. Your grammar is worse.

How can THAT be? YOU have suggested that you ARE confused! You even requoted it right here!

Again, how can it be? YOU suggested that I am right, and even quoted it in your OWN post! Both of these examples simply substantiate my opinion that you ARE confused!

There are no "legal facts" until the evidence has been submitted to a court and deemed valid. So far that's not happened.

Oh, I've heard of it!

And Markie, in the above exchanges, the First Ammendment has NOTHING TO DO WITH ANY OF THE COMMENTS.

If you're going to invoke the Bill of Rights, Markie, invoke the RIGHT ONES!

Idiot!

Oh Mr Markie! Don't YOU give ME any guff about "full quotes" ! !

We have a billion of your "cut" and "cuting" comments throughout RRAP!

> > That's all I need, Markie.

Your LYING has ALSO included numerous occassions wherein you've deceided to add your own "definitions". You failed to quote my "definition" of "AIDS".

Oh yes you have, Markie! (More Markie Lies!) You've made numerous rants wherein you've suggested that the exchanges herein somehow "prevented" you from getting something you think you deserve.

Lately that "something" you THINK you deserve is "respect", suggesting that everyone in this forum has yet to "earn" it from you!
THAT is the epitome of ARROGANCE!

Lot's of "cut" Markie.

Sure they do! They "aplly" to you to!

Since you seem to be having so much fun with the Tennessee Nurse Practice Act, I'll give you some time to find out why! It's in there!
Good luck!~

> > > get your attributions correct

"badly"

You are confused becasue YOUR lies are so interwoven and complex, leaving your unable to keep all the stories straight.

That ONE simple fact is why you keep getting tripped up on your own posts!

The OTHER simple fact is that your misuse and abuse of the English language leaves you hanging out to dry!

No...

YOU were lying in refering to yourself as one.

What's "inncocent"...?!?!

As for being "guilty" of claiming that you were a Colonel, that was proven a long time ago.

Obviously you have a problem "dealing" with reality. Everyone is a "bigot" to you.

The only thing that IS "obvious" is that you misuse the word
"bigot"

That's NOT what I said, Markie!

I said you couldn't even quote words correctly in the following sentence!

As for the "QUESTION", that was the one you posed to DAVE. I was commenting on your abusive use of the King's English.

There's no "libel".

Just you making a fool of yourself.

Markie, creeps like you call the hospitals EVERY DAY and try to "get Nurse So-and-So fired" for some perceived sleight.

Your "attempts" from the UP would be dismissed just as rapidly as the local ones are.

No one said you were responsible, Todd...as a matter fo fact if you read the subject line, you'll see it clearly states that.

What's REALLY neat is that your guilty conscience jumped in there and made excuses when you clearly were left blameless.

I am not lying.

You have sex with men.

That's gay.

You have sex with men. You're gay. That's not a sleight or misrepresentation, it's just the truth, one that YOU have acknowledged before.

Now if you'll just "get over" the terminology and move on, you'll be much happier with yourself.

Stevie you don't get

you have not been reading

the basis the prime base will be your lying in medcial matters

your refusaul to tell the ruth about people in medicaly related matters

You have lied about Tood father having AIDS

you have lied several times about me having AIDS you have even lied about my being HOMOsexual

you have lied about Todd being homosexual

you have lied about me suffering from pedophilia

you have lied about my status as a disabled person

you have made false medical dianoises about almost everyone in RRAP

At least in my case you claim to sent a letter to OFFICAILs concerning my mental health, given your passion for lying on here and that you say once a liar alwasy a liar(or words to that effect) it is reasonable to question wether you told the turth in that statement

If you lied to michigan you violated the regs wether enough to get your license yanked I don't know

we shall see

you just can't get your stoies straight

I quite agree. I also personally think to obtain a CB licence (UK im talking here) there should be a small test.. nothing complicated, just wiring on a PL259 correctly and how to use a SWR meter (as you say for Amateur too).
Thats two basic things ive seen either ignored or very badly done.. ie.
someone twisting the inner and outer of the co-ax together and shoving it through the hole in the PL.... then they wonder why the radio they just bought off you wont get out.... or someone say..swred an antenna?? whats that then?? sheesh..

Exceedingly unlikely now as to all intents and purposes the CB band isnt of interest to the authorities that be.
Oh well..............

Oh right.... mind you theres that much Ham stuff on the website is it a problem? I just read it with some interest and ask points that i think might be relevent. Theres more stuff about liars and army service on this group though for some reason. That i dont get.

Browsing the FCC internet site the sheer number of reply comments by one Californian caught my eye.

One quote was particularly petulant --- "Based on the twenty items discussed and comment on them, this commenter would urge the Commission to ignore ARRL desires..."

Perhaps, based on his tens of thousands of posts on the usernet, we should urge the Commission to ignore Leonard H. Anderson desires.

yes it is a misreprestation

it is not the turth

I have sex with women. in point of fact as it happens I have had sex with a woman within the hour

therefore I am not homosexual

this exchance proves IMO thatyou are unfit to be an LPN

you refuse to accept the fact that a the Bisexual orientation exists, indeed there are specail medical issues related to it, that you refuse to accept it existyance is proof IMO that you can not execute your duties as an LPN with respect to a Bisexaul person

looks like an AOL based forger is at work

did you forawrd it to the abuse@aol.com

not that they will do much about it sure looks like stevie is trying to set up a another fight meaning he si trying or he is being set up by one of his "buddies"

You need to learn to shoe a horse before you can drive a car!

Same difference. The NPRM is in the works. I'm already signed up for the first test session after code goes away. I passed element 2 and 3 with no studying, and missed 4 by two questions.
I've since borrowed the extra book from the library and read it.

I have no problem with anyone who likes code. I even believe there should be space for nothing but code, not mixed with other weak signal modes. I just don't want it forced down my throat. I might finish learning it if I don't have to.

form the state of Tennesee BOn From the BoN " in some cases a formal public hearing is held"

meaning Stevie lied in his claim I there is a hearing always and that I have to be there the form even makes askes if I am willin g to testify

meaning Stevielied when he claimed that to apear and tesify

these lies of course are the result of the fact Stevie confuses the (or never understood in the first place) the differences between Criminal, Civil and Adminstrative law

I'm a "Reform Christian"; i.e., Lutheran. :-)

Morsemen MUST belong to the Church of St. Hiram faith...

ADA still doesn't use any morse code.

ADA isn't subject to any "diplomacy" and is responsible only to the United States Army as Headquarters, U. S. Army Pacific.

The 10 year number for the book was just one out of the air. Older would have been just fine. My first ARRL hand book was bought in 1966. I did not get a ham license untuil about 1972. Had a 1 st class radiotelephone license around the same time. I have only used RTTY with an old mechanical unit, been keeping up a repeater for close to 30 years, I did write a rtty program for an old 8080 processor when I got tired of hearing the noise, used a few of the newer digital modes with the computer, worked a few of the OSCARs, active on 144 and 432 ssb. I do work some of the low bands also.
Guess that still makes me a newcomer to many.

Tsk, nothing was "hidden" in all those "score card." They are what they are.

Joe Speroni hides the fact that the official comment

Reporting a tally requires a website? Oh, my...! :-)

>How does your posting it here tell the FCC anything, Len?

Doesn't matter, Jimmie. I never said it did.

The direct communication by citizens with the Commission
"tells" them.

>But not all of it. I saw your anti-Extra diatribe. Some would say it Poor baby. Feeling petulant and whiny are you? :-)

Tsk, tsk, Jimmie. WRONG. The FCC doesn't "enact NPRMs."

Those are just NOTICES of PROPOSED Rulemaking. That's why they are called what they are. :-)

"Enacts" come from Reports and Orders.

You were there? You were in the military? I didn't know that.

Transmitters (a "bunch" of THREE DOZEN) was "run" by a COMPANY, Jimmie. [C Company in this case] Better read your books a little closer... :-)

"Peak the grid and dip the plate." :-) "Set procedure" for tube finals. Same "set procedure" for tube finals today, a half century later... :-)

After a (short) while I became one of the "experienced personnel," Jimmie. "Three up and one down" on the sleeve.
Operating Team Supervisor. E-5. NCO.

Oh, and I was NEVER trained to operate high-power transmitters in the Army, Jimmie. My Signal schooling was on microwave radio relay. A Field Radio MOS got trained on high-power transmitters on HF. [you need to read your books carefully]

Electrons, fields and waves don't differentiate between human discriminations in human ideas of things like human laws. Really.

Didn't you learn that at "Dexter?" :-)

FCC "recognizes" that they ONLY regulate United States CIVIL radio, Jimmie. They are limited to CIVIL radio by two Acts of Congress of the United States.

FCC can recognize other kinds of "civility" too! :-)

A majority of one.

It is a HEINOUS and IMMORAL to act against a morseman!

>You avoid the question because you know I'm right.

You are? I didn't know that...

>Because one person's opinion should not be counted multiple times.

Hey, let's count ALL 20 of those LAW STUDENTS (who don't have any professed desire to get ham licenses and doing some kind of class exercise at University of Tennessee) who got into the official time period of comments on 05-235! Some were FOR, some were AGAINST the NPRM. Do you know which ones, Jimmie?

Let's count an instructor at an English Departement of a west coast university who also stated outright she wasn't interested in any amateur radio license yet was against the NPRM! Joe Speroni counts her Comment as "pro-CW!"

How about Dwayne Sparks, Jimmie? He Commented (not one of his were Replies to Comments) 13 times "pro-CW." He is an Extra.

Jimmie, Joe Speroni's "analysis" does NOT consider what the federal government says is an official comment period and merely counts ALL. HIS "standards" set out to make it absolutely favorable towards radiotelegraphy testing...but he is "okay." He is "okay" because He is a morseman and that's "okay." [cue an old tired Monty Python sketch here...]

I'll let Bill the Cat comment: "Pbthbtht hthth..." :-)

I'm not in favor of the Amateur Radiotelegraphy Society.

I'm not in favor of CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS in the amateur

To NOT love an amateur morseman is to "hate ALL amateur radio licensees?" I think not.

BAD MISTAKE, Jimmie. Go stand in the corner.

"NPRM" is an acronym for Notice of Proposed Rulemaking. It is just a notice.

"R&O" is a familiar term for Report and Order. A Report and Order MAKES a regulation.

An NPRM and R&O are NOT the "same."

Tsk. You are overly concerned with "johnsons," Jimmie.

"Rot?"

How is your 1990s "original design" "tube-filled" "state of the

your expertise in making it?

Did they ever gush over your classic johnson?

So, you are offended that I mentioned "foreigners"?

I didn't call you out by name.

This newsgroup goes everywhere the Internet goes. The Internet is worldwide now.

As a United States CITIZEN I'm concerned about United States law as it applies to United States citizens. Last I looked,
United States law was NOT set by foreign citizens.

>The point is not whether comments by aliens have to be considered by the >FCC as a matter of law. Doubtless you are right in pointing out that they >don't.

The FCC regulates all civil radio in the United States. That regulatory power is set by two Acts of Congress (laws). Congress itself was established by the Constitution of the United States.

Last I looked, NO foreign government had any power to change
United States law.

>However, my impression is that the FCC neither knows nor cares about >the citizenship of those who post comments. If you think they should, and >there is certainly a case for that, then you should tell them, instead of >skewing your interpretation of the comments.

It is my contention that the FCC Staff and Commissioners know rather more than the basics of United States law and to which country they owe allegiance to...on the job and in their heart.

There is no need for me to tell the FCC that they work for the United States. They are well aware of that and no further comment is necessary.

So, I've "skewed" my "interpretation" by "mis-categorization" of 2 out of 3703 filings? That is some heinous crime? I've labeled them on MY tally as "indeterminate" and thus not affecting MY percentages. Both of them were FOR the NPRM.
We can't see how Joe Speroni counted those.

Did I "skew" my "interpretation" of a west coast English teacher's Comment AGAINST the NPRM even though she said up front that she has no license and is not desiring to get
one. Joe Speroni counts her as "pro-CW."

I said publicly that I'm NOT posting this "score card" publicly any more. Too many are terribly touchy (a few totally outraged) about it and it offends them, poor dears.

>However, the FCC has no capability to divide up the responses except by >whether or not they have an FCC licence, which arguably they shouldn't even >do, as responses from non-hams like you ought to be considered.

No?!? I've been TOLD (on 25 Jan 99 in WT Docket 98-143) by an Amateur Extra that I MUST NOT EVER be allowed to comment on ANY amateur radio regulation! [search for "Robeson" on that date]

I have been TOLD by non-military-service non-veterans what the military IS and that I am "wrong" in what I said about that.

I have been TOLD by those who got their degrees long ago that human laws somehow override physical laws, therefore amateur radio is "different" than every other radio service.

Brian Shoemaker, on a 31 October 2005 filing said outright in his Comment that "the only voice that should be heard on the current issue of rule changes to the HF bands are the users of the bands."

Shoemaker is PRO-code, therefore, by the Rules of Engagement in THIS newsgroup (where pro-code rules) his territorial imperative is "correct!" Is it?

Joe Speroni's "analysis" on his website is "NOT skewed" according to the local newsgroup Judge of what is "right" and "wrong."

Anyone NOT for morse code is "skewed" and "mistaken" and just plain "wrong" in here. They have TOLD us. <shrug>

Oh, wow, all those self-righteous TELLING ME WHAT TO DO! :-)

Why?

Most of the "old" reasons are still valid, IMHO.

> My short answer (and I'll be the first to say I > haven't read all comments) is that there are no
> new arguments raised... because if there had been

Here's one:

While several countries have eliminated code testing (23 the last time I looked, but you probably have more recent information, Bill), there are still plenty who have not. Japan, long the darling of the nocodetest folks, still has code testing for some of its license levels.

Many countries have reciprocal licensing agreements with the USA, so that American amateurs traveling abroad can get licenses for countries they visit,

Many of these countries do not extend full-privilege license privileges to foreign hams who are not code tested. If there is no code test in the USA, US amateurs won't be able to get licenses in those countries unless they take a code test there.

The "Canadian compromise" gets around that problem neatly.

--

Now a challenge:

In all of the anticode test arguments and comments has even one NEW reason to eliminate code testiing been offered?

It isn't from "university network", Len. For someone who has been around as long as you claim, you'd think you'd get this one right. This isn't even the first time you've been corrected.

From http://dict.die.net/usenet/

"<messaging> /yoos'net/ or /yooz'net/ (Or "Usenet news", from 'Users' Network') A distributed bulletin board system and the people who post and read articles thereon."

It looks as if you've made another of your frequent factual errors, Leonard.

The problem with that is it essentially means that every now and then,
in order to keep within the licence terms, one has to purchase a book.

Here in the UK we have problems with an organisation that has put itself in the position of 'representing all UK amateurs', and which sells books. It clearly does not do the former, and merely to add to its coffers as part of the licencing conditions is a battle which it has recently fought and looks like losing heavily.

>Older would have been just fine.

There is nothing wrong with your Amateur CV. The issue - at least for us in the UK - is the grasping self-interest of the 'national society', which has been so clearly revealed by recent events, and to which your proposal would add succour; that was really the point of my post.

Sure it does - you're just in denial.

If a rules change makes amateur radio more like cb, there's a definite connection. I think you'd like it if amateur radio became just like cb radio.

"Johnsons" Len.

Not "johnsons".

Yes. As if newer is always better and older is worthless. You seem to believe what Orwell wrote in "1984": "Ending is better than mending".

> How is your 1990s "original design" "tube-filled" "state of the Whoever said it was "state of the art", Len? Certainly not me.

In any event, I used the Southgate Type 7 in the CW part of the ARRL November Sweepstakes this past weekend. Made 443 QSOs in 77 sections. Only missed North Dakota, Alaska and the Pacific sections. Worked K0HB and W4NTI, too.

Yes, Len - all of them that weren't hangar queens - parts units. If you want to know how many that is, it comes to:

Heathkit:
Working: DX-20/VF-1, HW-101 (2 of them, with HP-23 and HP-13 supplies),

AR-2/QF-1, HW-2036,
Parts units: HW-101, DX-100

RME: 4350A and 45, both working

National:
Working: NC-173, NC-200
Parts units: NC-173

Hallicrafters: SX-99 and SX-101, both working

Gonset: Super 6, working

Southgate: Types 1 through 7, all working

Johnson:

Working: Adventurer, Valiant, Viking 2/122VFO
Parts unit: Viking 2

Except for the Southgates, one of the HW-101s, and the HW-2036,
I sold all of the above equipment - at a profit.

you think that would be newsflash right

Dave heil can think stop the presses

the LAW say the issues you claim are not important

I expect TN to obey its own laws

in the USA today that may be a bit foolish but i will take the chance wrong Dave like Stevie you think disagreeing with you is lying

I have lied about my rank and that is all I have told some lies that have lead Stevie off on wild goose chases about my identity that is it andI have have said in the mix something these post is a lie as I was making em, nor was under oath

how do these facts allow Stevie to claim someone has AIDS isn't lie about medical matters?

how does that allow Stevie to LIE about the procedure of BoN so he can try to frighten someon into not reporting him?

deal with reality Dave if you can you and ESP Stevie should remember that you don't know what I can or will do

Indeed just for illustration if i happened to paranoid threat to myself and other Stevie has claimed to be "his professional opinion" (and if anything gets him besides mouthing to an investagtor those words wil be it) pushing proding trying to rerate someone like risk

if you have Stevie has if Stevie has he will likely lose his licens or be oteherwise punished

but you are fool if you I am going to take on everyone at once

Stvie has pissed me off enough and he is far greater danger from a medical practice issue than ANYONE in the NG only Phil Kane has to be more careful and since he is an antonry not a paralegal (Stevie is the nursing version of a paralegal) he has greater latittude in giving professional LEGAL oppinions than Stevie has in Giving PROFESSIONAL nursing opinions

grow face facts

where disgreeing with you or confsuing you becuase you can't think or indeed if you are ever being truthfull yourself ain your claims you don't understand my writting you can't realy claim you know anything I

you are showing signs of meglomania in claiming your veiwpoint is the never claimed that is another lie from you Dave

I have never claimed that my lack of ability is ANYBODIES fault

It the fault of others that Codes testing contues to be requiredbut that is another matter
> You tell numerous lies wrong

> and >begin to call numerous others "lier".

I have caled 4 people liars (the Comode and the various slits are not proven to be people on their own so they don't count) and I have called on lies

you have lied today in saying I claimed a 200k income I have not you asumed incorrectly that that came as the only reason I would turn down a job making 240K. That you are (I infer from your action) a person that would do anything for money ( or something like that) and you assume everyone is like you (given the obvious differences betwen us assuming I would do anything the same way as you is REALY stupid Dave) is not my fault

you making incorrctly making assumetion beyond what I have said does not make me liar but when you make make statement of fact based on your incorect deduction it makes you the liar

how is taking part in the porcess of making the rules as provided for by law asking for a free ride in life?

you DON"T have to try to deipher my writing. I have never said you do.
You choose to do so, if you don't like the rsults of your efforts make another CHOICE nonone is holding a gun to your head and forcing you is there? certainly not by my order, if you think someone is holding a gun to head and making you read my stuf call 911, i am certain (a rarity for me) that in this event and you call someone will help you.

we are talking about YOU if you truely want me to get you fired then you are asking for my help and to get it you must pay MY price

I don't want you or Stevie fired from your jobs for my own sake.

In Stevies case we may end up there and indeed the result may turn out to be Stevie losing his job but that is not in fact my true aim, it may be what happens but we shall see

Oh yes it does, Lardass. You are the fuckup as usual. I got my advanced degree in business administration, just like it says at http://www.devry.edu/keller/programs/m_business_administration/about.jsp
and then I got an advanced fry cook job at a Glendale eating

You are NOT married? Are NOT a parent?

Considering all the talk about your "classic johnson" that's surprising!

>All existing amateurs could be affected.

By your "classic johnson?" Tsk, tsk!

>What's "not nice" about stating the facts, Len? Your >disdain of the ARS is not a secret.

I'm not in favor of the Amateur Radiotelegraphy Society.

I'm not in favor of CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS in the amateur radio service.

To NOT love an amateur morseman is to "hate ALL amateur radio licensees?" I think not.

>> >> NPRM 05-143 is solely about the MORSE CODE TEST, Jimmie.

BAD MISTAKE, Jimmie. Go stand in the corner.

"NPRM" is an acronym for Notice of Proposed Rulemaking. It is just a notice.

"R&O" is a familiar term for Report and Order. A Report and Order MAKES a regulation.

An NPRM and R&O are NOT the "same."

>So you had a shorty connected to your compact Johnson. Quite

Tsk. You are overly concerned with "johnsons," Jimmie.

Is your middle name in "James P. Miccolis" standing for PETER?

>What is your problem, Len?

Maybe because I don't have a "classic johnson?"

>You're misdirecting away from the point about cb.

This thread was originally about WT Docket 05-235. That Docket has NO relation to Citizens Band Radio Service.

>You don't affect me much at all, Len.

...and you don't post a lot in this newsgroup...

>I appreciate all sorts of classics.

Tsk, you and Davie "appreciate" those "classic johnsons" too much...

>You can keep whatever you want, Len. But I find it odd that you

"Rot?"

How is your 1990s "original design" "tube-filled" "state of the art" ham rig doing? Any more "neighbors" come over to gush over your expertise in making it?

Did they ever gush over your classic johnson?

>Many items are routinely referred to by the manufacturer's name.

Is it hard to beat a classic johnson?

Jimmie, go to your remaining classic johnson and turn it on.

See if it turns you on.

One other that I know about: L. Bruce McClung, elected in the same category, same day as Carl.

IEEE Standards Association sets many of the standards in use in electronics, followed voluntarily by designers, manufacturers, governments. Carl has been active in the Standards Association for years, particularly the "588" group (Wi-Max, Wi-Fi, etc).

One does NOT have to be a "licensed engineer" to belong to the IEEE as a member. There are two ways to do it: Have a degree in engineering; have at least three written affidavits by IEEE members vouching for an applicants' ability as an engineer.

"Licensed engineers" are those who have passed STATE exams in state legislated areas of engineering.

For further information on IEEE go to www.ieee.org.

>congrats Carl, but a bit more context if you don't mind Len

I thought it terribly IRONIC that long-time radio amateur
Carl Stevenson, WK3C, who WAS REFUSED A NOMINATION FOR OFFICE
AT THE ARRL (an AMATEUR organization), managed to not only GET ON a ballot of the IEEE (a PROFESSIONAL association), and WIN! :-)

K1MAN BULLETIN - B051109A -

K1MAN RESPONDS TO THE MOST TRUSTED MAN IN AMERICA, WALTER CRONKITE

9 November 2005

Walter Cronkite, KB2GSD
51 W. 52 St. Suite 1934
New York, N.Y. 10019

Walter,

I enjoyed the Neil Armstrong piece on "60 Minutes" yesterday. You were sure at the top of your game back then, for sure!

Dan Rather lectured at the University of Maine last week and suggested that journalists should get a "spine transplant." I immediately thought of you, caving in to anonymous hams and or unconfirmed false reports threatening to implicate you as well me with child molesting. Check your sources, Walter.

Perhaps you simply handled the matter wrongly. You did an ID for me when you were trying to promote your new autobiography. OK so far. You attached no limitations to my use of the ID. I used the ID on my world wide short wave program. Many of my detractors wrote to you and, of course, said I was illegal, etc., and that I was a convicted child molester, etc., which you would be associated with. Your secretary called me about the child molesting issue. You then wrote and asked me to stop using the ID. I agreed if you would come on my program and explain your reasons. You declined. I continued using the ID so as not to cave in to the blackmail as you were so willing to do. Then you call ME unethical?! Who is being unethical here?

You hypocrite! You lobby the FCC to revoke my license after John F. Kennedy threatened you and CBS with trying to influence the FCC when you insisted on running his flubbed remarks during a presidential campaign interview with you. You didn't cave in then!

Here is what you should have done with K1MAN. Ignore the idiots or else publish a disclaimer. Yes, you did the ID but no, you do not endorse AARA, or whatever; not publish a letter on the internet that Glenn Baxter is "unethical." Pretty strong word, Walter!

Believe me, if I were illegal doing what W1AW has done for almost 100 years, the FCC and U.S. Government are smart enough and powerful enough to do something about it other than defame me with their silly and anemic notices of APPARENT liability. Let's go to court, Walter, and I will call you as my first witness! God bless America, the land of the free and home of the brave.

The FCC is a corrupt agency. Big deal. This is America, and we do have some corruption. We also have laws. I am protected by our wonderful laws.

I am devoting a very critical chapter about you in my new philosophical autobiography which is being published on the internet as I write it. See www.K1MAN.com. Your scurrilous letter about me will be all over the internet for many years. You and your employee, Brian Crow, sure do take some real cheap shots! I feel truly sorry for both of you, but I forgive you both.

God bless you and your family. You looked just great on TV last night.

73,

(signed)
Glenn Baxter, K1MAN

P.S. My book covers your many good traits as well as your very bad ones. Let the readers and history be the judge.

Paul wrote to the Philippians, New Living Translation:

1-28. "Don't be intimidated by your enemies. This will be a sign to them that they are going to be destroyed, but that you are going to be saved, even by God himself."

And, in the King James Version:

4-8. "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

I didn't realize that there was some pre-requisite for explaining the origin of ANY word in ANY application.

We can ask why Brain prefers the term "dick". One historical reference to the implementation of this word is that it is of old Germanic origin.

So, can we assume now that since Brain has insisted on the use of a Germanic word rather than a Hebrew word that he's purporting to support the neo-Nazi Aryan philosophies?

Using the "logic" of Brain and Markie, we must certainly assume so.

Nope.

The three of you insist that I am somehow engaged in some sort of religious-based assault based upon my preference for the word "putz"

over some other word. That's simply untrue.

Actually "Johnson" is capitalized as it is a proper name.

And it's a sure bet that any Johnson owned by Dave or Jim IS bigger than one YOU own, Lennie....Unless you have a picture of your Johnson? Of course we've been trying to get you to show us pictures of your radios, but you refuse.

Perhaps you were speaking of some OTHER Johnson?

Naaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaah! Lennie would NEVER be refering to the

He's ABOVE all THAT!

Geeeee.....what does it say that it takes the IEEE 150 countries to amass 365,000 members when the ARRL manages to do half that number in only 1 or 2....?!?!?!

Certainly there are more EE's than licensed Amateurs?

Are they not being paid enough to join the IEEE?

Obviously not.

an anti Len attack thread

Carl Stevenson was elected Member at Large of the IEEE Standards Association in IEEE news e-mailed to members today. He will serve a 2-year term beginning 1 January 2006. Carl is also Executive Director of No Code International.

IEEE is the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers and is the world's largest professional technical organization with

Sorry, your Royal Pompousness, ARPANET connected a number of universities and defense industry locations back in the 70s and 80s. Not a great many, nowhere the size of the Internet of today, but enough to justify the ARPANET experience. The nominal user throughput in those days was 100 Baud or equal to 100 WPM (earlier times by TTY machinery, later by "dumb" electronic terminals). "High speed" then was 300 Baud or 300 WPM. :-)

>For someone who has been >around as long as you claim, you'd think you'd get this one right.

Tsk, tsk, tsk.

No doubt you will pull up some "modern-day" claim that ARPANET (standing for Advanced Research Projects Agency NETwork) isn't what I say it is? :-)

I'm using the OLD naming conventions, your Royal Pompousness.

ARRL did NOT invent "USENET" nor was it involved in that network before 1991 and Internet going public. ARRL has NOT been a member of ARPANET.

>This isn't even the first time you've been corrected.

Tsk. You've TRIED to correct me but all you've done is to attempt forcing the pro-code-test-advocate opinion as the ONLY "correct" one. Total PCTA Effluence, your Royal Pompousness.

>It looks as if you've made another of your frequent factual errors, Leonard.

No, your Royal Pompousness. I was on it back then. You were NOT.

I began in HF radio communications in early 1953...using no less than three dozen HF transmitters having minimum RF power outputs of 1 KW...the station operating 24/7 as a primary node of the worldwide U.S. Army communications network. You tried to say that I "lied" in describing that station and the Army network. I didn't lie.

I was briefly on ARPANET in the 70s, doing defense contractor work and using the just-born USENET for that defense work purpose. In the quarter century since then a number of NAMES have changed to reflect the changing nature of human activity. ARPA became DARPA and grew in size and scope. USENET changed much more and became a mainstay of the Internet once Internet went public in 1991.

Now you are busy, busy, busy with your little gardening Bobcat trying to build a mountain of "error" out of the origin of USENET molehill? Why? Neither the Internet nor USENET is amateur radio nor is anyone required to be "licensed via taking a morse code test" to be on them.

>> ARRL can do NO wrong? To speak against them is heresy?
>
>Everyone should listen to you?

Tsk, tsk, your Royal Pompousness. My rhetorical question had NOTHING to do with me, ONLY the ARRL.

Just a plain, simple fact: ARRL supports the PCTA opinion of WHAT SHOULD BE IN AMATEUR RADIO.

Why should they? ARRL is a MINORITY group. Their membership is only 1 in 5 licensed U.S. radio amateurs. ARRL does NOT represent 4 out of 5 licensed U.S. radio amateurs.

YOU are telling US that some elite, self-defined "leader" of a hobby activity MUST Tell All How Ham Radio SHOULD BE?!?

Of course you are.

You are a BELIEVER in the "leadership" of the ARRL. ARRL is sacred, is untouchable. PBthpbththththththt.

>You know how amateur radio should be because...?

Tsk, tsk, tsk. Your Royal Pompous Effluent Orifice is sore?

WT Docket 05-235 is about the elimination of the code test for GETTING INTO amateur radio through FCC licensing. GETTING INTO.

That's a simple concept. But, to those all wrapped up in their patriotic (invisible) bunting of ARRL "official" colors and morsemanship as the extra-super-special-skill for amateurs (as the ARRL has preached and lobbied)...you cannot see that simple concept. Your abject HATRED of certain personalities in here blinds you to what others can plainly see.

>> Sunnuvagun, if the English Department of a west coast university >> wants to "vote" for code testing...and twenty Tennessee law >> students can use WT Docket 05-235 for Moot Court practice, fine, >> PROHIBIT all they want!
>I see. Don't listen to the ARRL; listen to an uninvolved party with an >ax to grind. Brilliant!

It must be "brilliant" if Joe Speroni wants to include an English teacher at a university (west coast, of all things) who states openly that she is NOT getting any amateur radio license, as "for" morse code testing as an entry exam for something she is NOT INVOLVED IN! Speroni is absolutely PCTA, an old morseman with an "axe" to grind for that singular mode. The AH0A website shows that. The Speroni "analysis" page shows that "English department"
ID at the top of his icon-filled "chart."

Speroni has a number of FACTUAL ERRORS in his INTERPRETATION of WT Docket 05-235 filings. I've pointed out some of them, have not exhausted that list. You WANT Speroni's pro-CW viewpoint to persist and rule, plus you want any anti-code-test viewpoint to be shut up, eliminated, thrown away by any force you can use.
You SHOW that in NOT remearking about anyone else negatively
but my comments.

So far, your Royal Pompousness, all you've done is engage in pure, simple, factual Character Assassination of me and several other NCTAs in public. Can't call it anything else...you want to PROHIBIT discussion and dictate that all should follow ARRL in anything...not just in licensed amateur radio, but in all things.

Enjoy your elitist exclusivity while it exists. It won't be so forever. If you can't get any Oriongasms now, go play with your big classic johnson. Turn it on and see if it turns you on.

Not ironic at all.

The standards of amateurism are different. Ask Jim Thorpe.

Carl had more than enough signatures on his nomination papers.
But the Executive Committee that decides such matters though there was a conflict of interest between his professional duties and being an ARRL Director, and declared him ineligible to run. That decision was not reversed by the BoD.

Some members of ARRL, particularly in the Atlantic Division, did not agree with that decision, and made their disagreement known to the BoD, the other officers of ARRL, and anybody else involved. Those efforts to get him on the ballot were, unfortunately, not successful.

btw, it is interesting to note the name of Carl's firm.

Why? Because he has one and you do not?

You know damn well that Carl got tossed off the nomination sheet
due to his being Executive Director of No Code International.
ARRL doesn't want no-coders. ARRL wants only those "acceptible"
to the BoD hierarchy.

sorry Len you blew it the ARRL BoD is alive. The dead the do have better manner and more honesty

Dave says I must my fellows No Coders when they make mistake and I'll take his advice (be sure and thank him for me)

I can not allow to defile the dead as general class ( as opposed to general license holders) by trying to class the ARRL BoD amoug them. I will have to write a strong worded to the LA Times or something if you don't stop distrubing the peace the dead have earned by trying include the ARRL BoD amoug them before they have to accept those "persons" for want of a better word

Those of us who know about his election.

So? Membership is not required to offer congratulations.

ARRL isn't 'god', Len. Neither are you.

Ah, another one of your "shut up" phrases.

I'm quite alive, Len.

You might be surprised to know who some of those who supported WK3C's candidacy for ARRL director are, Len.

> >btw, it is interesting to note the name of Carl's firm.

No.

Do you know the name of his firm?

No, I don't know that at all. You don't either, you just take any excuse to bash ARRL.

> ARRL doesn't want no-coders.

Really? Many of the directors support the elimination of the code test.
So does much of the membership. The ARRL proposal to keep the test for Extra only is a compromise meant to give the diverse ARRL membership
some of what they want.

Compromise - do you know what that is, Len?

> ARRL wants only those "acceptible" to the BoD hierarchy.

"Acceptible"?

I know the five pillars of Islam. Known them for years:

1) Belief in the one true God, and that His Prophet is His messenger.

2) Prayer 5 times a day

3) Charity

4) Fasting/purification

5) Pilgrimage to Mecca for those who can.

Of course Islam is a lot more complex and diverse than those 5 pillars.

What any of that has to do with the subject line is rather obscure.

This is the guy who called me a liar for saying that he had 12 callsigns. One callsign at his address belonged to his wife. I got is so wrong!

The icing on the cake is that he holds a Hawaiin callsign but had never been to Hawaii.

Borrowed the Hawaiin PO Box from some Coast Guardie.

Meanwhile the Coast Guardie had borrowed a Guam PO Box and got hisself a KH2 call.

You've made another assertion of fact, Brain.

That assertion would be, in most cases, the rendering of a diagnosis,
which requires a degree as a medical doctor.

Are you now telling us that you are a medical doctor?

Please cite what criteria you base this diagnosis on?

That I have labled you a liar after having presented you with your own
words only to have you try and deny it...?!?!

Or that I have labeled you a liar becasue you've made OTHER
assertions of fact for which you refuse to corroborate with some reasonably valid documentation?

Steve, K4YZ

Steve jumps up and down, thinks "nuts" is a medical diagnosis. Wonder where he got his medical training?

Meanwhile Steve diagnoses a brand name drug to a person on the internet (across state lines) and follows it up with a comment that it's his "professional" opinion.

Hmmm? Did he get any medical training at all?

Why are you wandering all over the place? The term "usenet" does not come from "university network". It really is as simple as that.

ARPANET wasn't the issue. Your incorrect defintion of the term "usenet" is the issue.

Oh. The "OLD" naming conventions which others don't use. I see.

I wrote nothing of the ARRL inventing anything. I wrote that your definition of the term "usenet" is incorrect. It turns out that the fellow you were correcting had it right after all.

I've TRIED and succeeded in correcting your factual errors on a number of issues. My opinion on morse testing is not relevant to your error.

Whoopty-do. If you went around telling others that "usenet" came from "university network", you were wrong then too. Tsk.

What has all that to do with your error in defining "usenet"? Your tale of your military communications experience of better than fifty years ago is as irrelevant to the definition of "usenet" as it is to amateur radio.

> You tried to say that I "lied" in describing that

That is simply incorrect.

That's nice. You still made an error in stating that "usenet" came from "university network".

Quit trying to pass yourself off as an expert in areas where you are obviously not an expert. You got it wrong. You made an error. Why do you need multiple lengthy paragraphs to attempt misdirection. Accept that you goofed.

> Why? Neither the Internet nor

My non-rhetorical statement had to do with you. Why should anyone listen to your views about where amateur radio should be headed?
After all, you have no amateur radio experience and you have no stake in amateur radio.

The NAACP has done pretty well for itself. The ARRL is by far, the largest amateur radio organization in the United States. No other amateur radio organization in America has anywhere near the ARRL's membership. I know it chafes you, but them's the facts.

You don't represent any U.S. radio amateur.

> YOU are telling US that some elite, self-defined "leader" of

I like the League's ideas much, much more than I like yours. You aren't a radio amateur. You don't represent a single radio amateur. You're simply some goofy geezer with a lot of time to devote to flooding the FCC with multiple comments and replies. You're fixated on something in which you do not participate.

> Of course you are.

No, I've changed my mind and have decided to pick up your banner and follow you, Len....not.

> You are a BELIEVER in the "leadership" of the ARRL. ARRL is

...and you are an elderly goofball.

You grow more peculiar by the day. Tsk, tsk tsk. Poor baby.

You aren't getting into. You've told us that you aren't getting in. Then again, that has changed with the breezes.

> That's a simple concept. But, to those all wrapped up in their

You aren't in. You aren't getting in. You've taken not a single step during your self-declared decades of "interest" in amateur radio, toward obtaining an amateur radio license. You're simply an elderly geezer with time on his hands and an amateur radio fixation.

> Your abject HATRED of certain personalities in here
> blinds you to what others can plainly see.

I don't hate you, Len. You amuse me. You are certainly a personality, and not a pleasant one.

>>> Sunnuvagun, if the English Department of a west coast university >>> wants to "vote" for code testing...and twenty Tennessee law
>>> students can use WT Docket 05-235 for Moot Court practice, fine,

So? You've made eight or so submissions to the FCC on 05-235. How does Speroni count your submission? After all, you've stated openly that you aren't getting an into amateur radio. It is something you aren't involved in.

> Speroni has a number of FACTUAL ERRORS in his INTERPRETATION of

Has he? You two will find that you have something in common.

What do you SHOW, Len?

> other NCTAs in public.

Why is character assassination capitalized, Len? Your character hasn't been assassinated by me. I'd think that you'd want to be careful of what you accuse others. After all, Google has a splendid archive of the things you've written of others. You aren't a victim; you're a perpetrator.

> Can't call it anything else...you want > to PROHIBIT discussion...

Why, Leonard H. Anderson! You've just made a deliberately false statement. Tsk, tsk, tsk. Poor baby.

> ...and dictate that all should follow ARRL

You may be on to something. I think the League should diversify--maybe get into the oil business. Why, with that and the ARRL stake in gambling (as handled by the "Field Organization"), we could control a huge chunk of the action. :-) :-)

> Enjoy your elitist exclusivity while it exists.

Oh, I shall, Leonard. I shall. I assume that you mean the exclusivity of being a licensed radio amateur, something which has eluded you.

> It won't be so forever.

I'm going to lose my license? I'm going to forget morse code?

> If you can't get any Oriongasms now, go play with your > big classic johnson.

What is an Oriongasm? Oh, and you've made yet another factual error.
The term is "big, classic Johnson".

> Turn it on and see if it turns you on.

I have and it does. Does your tiny Johnson turn anyone on?

I've known them for years, Mark. They're pretty basic: Monotheism, prayer, stewardship, Ramadan, and the Hajj.

How impressed should you be that I know such basic stuff about Islam?

It wasn't Steve who asked if I knew the 5 pillars.

Steve, when I put forth my opinion that you were nuts, you jumped up and down asking where my medical degree came from, screaming and crying like a little baby that I had made a medical diagnosis.
>
But here you are clearly prescribing a medication by name to a person
by name, and following it up with the statement that it's your professional opinion. When you step outside your medical authority and prescribe medication to someone that you've never met or examined, you jump up and down and scream and cry that you >aren't< making a medical diagnosis.
>
You're such a two-faced little skunk. Best of Luck with the board.

Five minutes on Google provides.

Here's two such incidents. There are more.

Steve tried to use his professional license to:

1. diagnose a mental illness over the internet, and
2. get someone in another state committed with a simple phone call.

You've made another assertion of fact, Brain.

That assertion would be, in most cases, the rendering of a diagnosis,
which requires a degree as a medical doctor.

Are you now telling us that you are a medical doctor?

Please cite what criteria you base this diagnosis on?

That I have labled you a liar after having presented you with your own
words only to have you try and deny it...?!?!

Or that I have labeled you a liar becasue you've made OTHER
assertions of
fact for which you refuse to corroborate with some reasonably valid documentation?

I re-extend my offer to use my professional contacts to help you, Brain. It always looks better on your record to appear as having been aware you ahve a problem and taking steps to fix it, than to be involuntarilly commited in order to force the issue.

I can make that happen for you, Brain. Shall I make the call....?!?!?

Wrong Toadfish you don't even know your own countries law, so to show how dumb you are, here is a VK to tell you the US Regs WHICH YOU SHOULD KNOW ALREADY.

Whilst I'm not American, I would bet (yes, I looked at fcc site) that as the FCC is the department responsible for radio and tele communications then it would and does have regulatory power over the internet.

SO ACCORDING TO THE US LEGISLATION I HAVE JUST READ THE FCC DOES GOVERN WHATEVER TRAVELS VIA THE MEDIUMS MENTIONED BELOW, WHICH MEANS THE WEB TOADFISH. SO I SUGGEST AS MANY US HAMS AS POSSIBLE FILE COMPLAINTS AGAINST K1MAN, N9OGL AND OTHERS THAT MAKE THREATS, ARE OBSCENE ETC AND BRING AMATEUR RADIO INTO DISREPUTE.

PEOPLE LIKE N9OGL AND K1MAN ARE A BPL COMPANIES DREAM, WHAT A GREAT EXAMPLE OF 'HAM RADIO' THEY PROVIDE. HOW LONG WOULD THE PUBLIC SUPPORT US IF A BPL CO GOT A STORY LIKE THAT ONTO PRIME TIME?

From FCC Site:
"The FCC was established by the Communications Act of 1934 and is charged with regulating interstate and international communications by radio, television, wire, satellite and cable. The FCC's jurisdiction covers the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and U.S. possessions."

So if your stupidity-Toadfish-travels by tv, radio, wire, satellite or cable then you can have a complaint lodged against you. How does the internet arrive at your QTH Toadfish? Immaculate Connection perhaps?

Which means, they can and do also regulate the internet within the US and possessions...idiot. For a ham Mr Toad, I thought you'd know what tele and radio communications mean. Just shows how thick you are, here's a VK that know's more about your FCC than you do, just shows how little about the FCC and your regs that you actually know. Perhaps a licence re-test for you as you appear to need to study up on regulations Toadfish.

BTW. We have a ham in VK who does his own radio show each week, like Toadfish and K1MAN but it's nothing like thier crap. See, this VK uses AM on 160m with a 2m FM crossband signal and has technical discussions with other hams, as he was a former radio broadcaster, he enjoys using the AM mode, but he uses professional, commercial standard AM broadcast equipment, not a CD Walkman and a Walmart microcphone plugged into a Karoake machine. He also puts on old, historic broadcasts that the stations he worked at turfed out years ago-such as the 1930 Melbourne Cup, the Skylab Crash, WW1 & WW2 transmissions from world leaders, advertisments from last century, mostly during Radio's Golden Age. But these are of a historical nature and are really archival audio, that many VK's enjoy listening to every Saturday night. They've also done shows from the beach on New Year's Eve over the years. What they do is just within the regs, but these guys do it professionally with professional equipment. He does not put his show up on THE PRIME DX BAND, does he Toady.

Fortunatly, we don't get the Toad Bulletin or K1MAN's b/s down under, but I'm willing to bet, that if anyone here downloads and listens to the VK AM 'broadcasts' of VK3ASE from his website, that they will be at least within the amateur service regs. Remember it's a bit of silly fun to these guys.

If your local AM station was, say, attacked Toady, could you take over and become their studio/transmitter immediatly? If yes, then you have met some standards. If not, then what you're doing is a waste of time. .

He doesn't- (a) put his show on HF DX bands, (c)is carrying out technical investigation (c) his shows and studio is a former AM station and his signal is of the highest (almost as good as MW stations) standard. (d) other hams are there talking cross-band, so it becomes like a 'ham-radio talkback show' if you like. But the main difference I notice is these guys do it for fun and a bit of a laugh on a Sat night, Toady & K1MAN have this granduer dream that they are somehow important, and as they are so important, the need a bulletin like the ARRL.

I suggest you look here Toady, to see how an amateur does 'bulletins' properly. http://members-central.optushome.com.au/vk3ase/

Look at pictures on that homepage Toady....and clean that mess of ya screen!

After much reading this n/g I have concluded that N9OGL and K1MAN are politicians in training. Only pollies could be such wankers LOL.

Oh, I know, K1MAN and N9OGL should team up with Eminem, 'cause the FCC won't let him be' either... and you could all work together to 'screw the fcc'.

well that only shows you have not been following the arguement in here Dave, the contention that along withe the ProCode test babagage comes continue to pile on the evidence that something more than just being proCode is wrong with the proCoder's suggesting that the position on everyone does. everyone on the planet ( and it is not limited to the earth assuming that life exists out there) has a stake in how the airwaves are used

I comend Len on his public spirt in showing scuh interest and attetnion

The Airwaves don't belong to us as Hams Dave, they belong to the people of them and it is the duty of regulators to try and serve the PUBLIC interest not the narrow interest of Some hams like yourself

here know.

>Whilst I'm not American, I would bet (yes, I looked at fcc site) that as

Technically the do, however, they don't have control over the CONTENT.
The US congress from 1996 to 2005 has tried to give the FCC the power over the content of the Internet, but our Federal courts has repeatedly struck them down as being unconsititutional, see Communication Decency Act 1996

>SO ACCORDING TO THE US LEGISLATION I HAVE JUST READ THE FCC DOES GOVERN

except content, Again the FCC is prohibited from controlling the content of a website. As for radio they are also prohibited from controlling the content of a station. Section 326 of the Communication Act of 1934 prohibits the FCC from controling the content of any radio station, except obscene and indecent material. (See below)

§ 326. Censorship

Nothing in this chapter shall be understood or construed to give the Commission the power of censorship over the radio communications or signals transmitted by any radio station, and no regulation or condition shall be promulgated or fixed by the Commission which shall interfere with the right of free speech by means of radio communication.

Again, the FCC isn't allow to control the content of a website. They are also prohibited to control the content of any radio station, except obscene and indecent material over radio or tv. As a matter of fact the link litoi posted is a link to the FCC complaint form for indecency over broadcast radio.

Hon, let me tell you something I've been in radio and communications a long time, LOOOONNNNG before I got into amateur radio and my knowledge over radio law is a little better then what you and some of amateur radio operators (who I would call nothing more then licensed CB operators) think.

>BAND, does he Toady.

First of toots, I don't use a "walmart walkman" and a "karoake machine"
I run top of the line "commercial quality equipment" including duel CD player and duel CD burners (no computer burners but industy recording burners. duel tape / editing equipment, two audio mixers and recently i've been formatting old programs I've done into MP3 format with my iMac G5

Secondly babe, There is no rule in the FCC rules that prohibit Information bulletins on any band, back in mid 90's W5YI and others tried to get the rule changed to prohibit information bulletins on any HF band the ones against this change...ARRL which rules information bulletins on a number of HF bands (more band then I run mine on). Today the FCC will not hear any changes regarding prohibiting information bulletins on any HF band

Fortunatly, we don't get the Toad Bulletin or K1MAN's b/s down under, but I'm willing to bet, that if anyone here downloads and listens to the VK AM 'broadcasts' of VK3ASE from his website, that they will be at least within the amateur service regs. Remember it's a bit of silly fun to these guys.

The problem I think you and a number of amateur operators have is it: The difference here between legal and illegal one-way communications a illegal one-communication is a broadcast. A broadcast under FCC rules is a transmitted directed to the general public. A information bulletin is a bulletin directed to amatuer operators consisting sole of material of interest to the amateur community. Now I know you and and few amatur operators on here are SLOW so let me give you some examples.

if my show, the n9ogl show was on 20 meter and I was talking about healthcare, that would be considered a broadcast. because it is not of amateur interest and would fall under the Broadcasting rules. Now if My show was on 20 meters and giving my opinion regarding national antenna regulation and how it affects amateur radio it would be considered an information bulletin. Hams need to get it through their heads there is NO FCC STANDARD on what format amateur's are suppose to use in regards to information bulletin, amateur's have got it in their thick heads that a information bulletin has to be a "NEWSCAST" however there is NO FCC rule or order that states that. The FCC does in a sense look at the content to see if it's of amateur in natural. The problem is however if that hasn't been tested in the courts, which have somewhat the final say in the whole thing.

>If your local AM station was, say, attacked Toady, could you take over >and become their studio/transmitter immediatly? If yes, then you have >met some standards. If not, then what you're doing is a waste of time. .

eh?

>like a 'ham-radio talkback show' if you like. But the main difference I >notice is these guys do it for fun and a bit of a laugh on a Sat night, >Toady & K1MAN have this granduer dream that they are somehow important, >and as they are so important, the need a bulletin like the ARRL.

No dreams of graduer here babe, I do it fun, the problem is a bunch of fucking licensed CB operators dictating to another station on how he is to run his station.

[I suggest you look here Toady, to see how an amateur does 'bulletins' properly. http://members-central.optushome.com.au/vk3ase/

Look at pictures on that homepage Toady....and clean that mess of ya screen!

After much reading this n/g I have concluded that N9OGL and K1MAN are politicians in training. Only pollies could be such wankers LOL.

Oh, I know, K1MAN and N9OGL should team up with Eminem, 'cause the FCC won't let him be' either... and you could all work together to 'screw the fcc'. ]

Whatever toots, go back to playing with your kangaroos

Well....

It usually doesn't take long for Mark Morgan to cross himself up with his own demands, but here's a prime example.

Markie sent me this e mail stating he sent something to AOL...I am not sure WHAT he thinks he sent to AOL, but the fact remains that Markis has gone out of his way to not only REFUSE e mail relative to this NG, but to insist that he's being stalked and terrorized as a result of it.

However I guess that doesn't apply to HIM.

Markie...Just WHAT do you think you sent to AOL...?!?!

You said you'll "bearchiving it as proof of your pasion for lying to" (sic) but you don't say lying about what, nor did you say who you allege the (non-existant) lie was made to.

Markie...SOBER UP before you get busy in the NG, OK?
